GET A MOVE ON!

IT was on March 23 last year that the Colonial Secretary, Mr. Claude Burgess, announced in the Legislative Council the attitude of Government had decided to adopt following the report of the Commission of Inquiry. He said then that the companies "are now exploring all possibilities to find a formula which might cover most of the recommendations of the Commission short of nationalisation."

"The aim is to ensure that Government is given a maximum degree of control consistent with the retention by the companies of the incentive to efficiency and expansion." Mr. Burgess went on to say that the formula must be presented "against the background of ultimate amalgamation and integration of their generating capacity."

A further seven months passed before the electricity companies put before Government their alternative proposals and it has taken Government another three months to decide that they are unacceptable and to say why. Rightly Government believes that "there would be grave dangers in any precipitate conclusion" but it seems that a lot of time could have been saved if Government had said last March what it said in its statement issued on Friday night.

THE blame for the long delay does not lie entirely with Government because the companies indicated that their formula would be all embracing—and it was not. But when Government's directive is loose enough to allow them to formulate the most advantageous proposals for themselves and their shareholders it is unreasonable to accuse them of prevaricating.

A conflict of interests exists. The companies are anxious to retain as much freedom as possible and can hardly be expected to impose upon themselves shackles which will satisfy management and shareholders on the one hand, and the consuming public on the other. And as long as this haggling correspondence continues with Government refusing to spell out in clear terms what it deems desirable, this conflict will defy solution.

IF Government has made up its mind on the extent of protection required for the consumers let it now say so and put an end to this procrastination. If on the other hand it is anxious to secure the companies' agreement to the controls it proposes, then a representative of both sides should meet and settle the matter at the conference table.

Government's intentions are undoubtedly well-meaning and we agree that a mutually satisfactory solution is preferable to one imposed with insufficient regard to the companies' problems. But we do believe it could have been settled, or brought much nearer a settlement if Government had made its attitude clearer in the first place, instead of this rather tedious exchange of ideas which is now taking place and which has given rise to surprise, impatience and bewilderment.

Low losses appeal against conviction JUDGES ATTACK INTERPRETERS

Law Society should set about putting house in order

Two Supreme Court judges today attacked the present position of interpreters in Hongkong solicitors' offices.

GUARANTEES FOR SHIP REBELS

Rio de Janeiro, Jan. 29. The rebel-held Portuguese liner Santa Maria was tonight reported cruising outside Brazilian territorial waters while waiting for Tuesday's inauguration of President Janio Quadros, who is said to favour the rebels' cause. Newspapers here today quoted Mr. Janio Quadros as saying that if Galvao brought the liner into a Brazilian port "I will give him all the guarantees he needs."

General Humberto Delgado, Portuguese chief of state in exile, issued a message here tonight advising Captain Henrique Galvao, who seized the Santa Maria last weekend, to remain in international waters until the inauguration.

FIVE MILES

Earlier a Brazilian radio station had reported the 20,000-ton liner 20 miles off Recife, northeast Brazil, and quoted Captain Galvao as saying he would stop the Santa Maria five miles off Recife to parley with United States and Brazilian officials.

(The Tunis magazine Afrique Action today quoted Galvao as saying he and his 70 comrades

PLANES LOSE SANTA MARIA

Recife, Jan. 29. United States reconnaissance planes today lost track of the rebel-held Portuguese liner Santa Maria.

Eight planes took off at 1330 GMT to continue tracking the liner—seen yesterday about 120 miles off Fernando Noronha Island.

Seven of the planes were due to return as soon as the liner was spotted leaving one to circle the ship. The planes had not returned nearly seven hours later.—Reuters.

COOLER WEATHER IN E. AUSTRALIA

Sydney, Jan. 29. Eastern Australia was in the grip of a heatwave over the weekend but it turned cooler tonight bringing relief to most areas.

Sydney's official maximum temperature today was nearly 107 degrees—the highest this summer—but readings in other parts of the state were up to 118 degrees. The heat buckled some railway lines, caused signal failures and delayed many trains.—AP.

Mr Justice C. W. Reece said that "something is rotten in the State of Denmark, and it is time the Law Society set about putting their house in order."

Mr Justice Mills-Owens described as "notorious" the system whereby interpreters introduced business to the firms of solicitors employing them and obtained so-called "brokerage" from the clients and commissions from their firms. The two judges, with Mr Justice W. A. Blair-Kerr, were delivering judgment on the appeal by Hongkong solicitor Robert E. Lam against his conviction on nine charges of corruptly receiving gifts. The appeal was dismissed by a two-to-one majority, Mr Justice Mills-Owens dissenting.

Unsatisfactory In his majority judgment, Mr Justice Reece recalled that the trial judge had said: "It has even been suggested that some interpreters earn more money from their activities than the partners in the firm of solicitors." "The state of affairs revealed is unsatisfactory," said the judge.

Mr Justice Reece said he would go even further. "I take the view that such a state of affairs reveals that 'something is rotten in the State of Denmark' and it is time the Law Society set about putting their house in order and ensuring that the honour and reputation of the profession is maintained at the highest level of integrity which it has always enjoyed," he said.

Keynote Commenting on the "brokerage" system, Mr Justice Mills-Owens said that in his view it was the existence of this system which had brought about the frauds in this case, and the system was the keynote to the charges to which the appellant laid himself open.

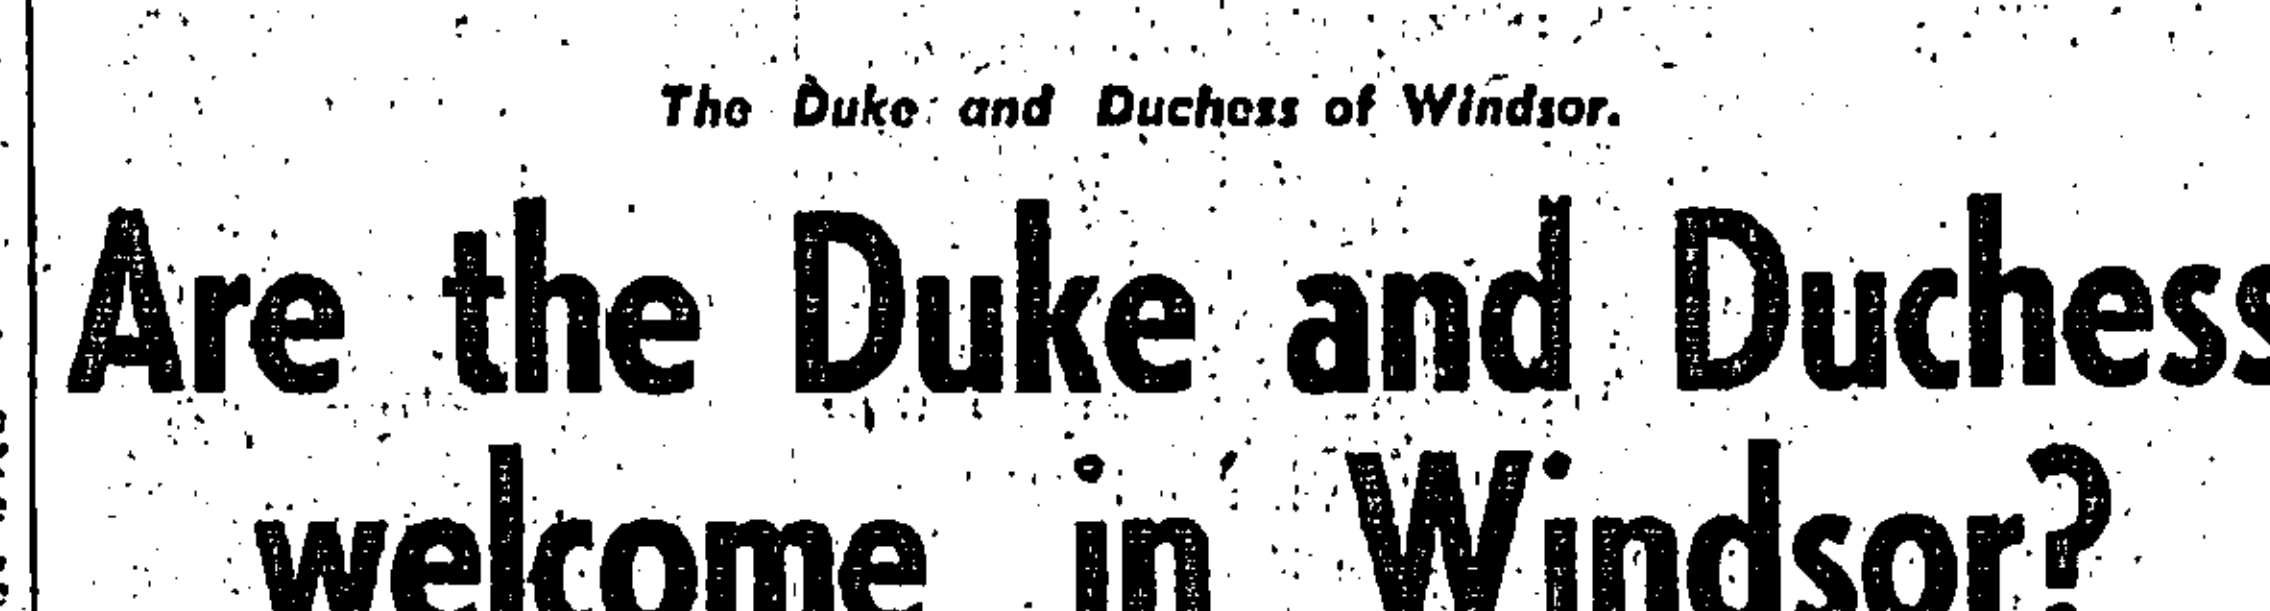

"Apart altogether from the matter of corruption, the system tends to bring about the position whereby assistant solicitors take the word of their interpreters for matters which in other circumstances they would look into for themselves," Mr Justice Mills-Owens said.

"The tendency is for the interpreter to arrange the whole transaction between the clients and present it to the assistant solicitor as a fait accompli, except for the 'irresponsible necessity' of preparation and completion of legal documents," he added.

Mr Justice Mills-Owens also commented on the actions of the police and the other partners of Wilkinson and Grist in the case. He recalled that on his return from England, Low was met at Hongkong airport by his partners in Wilkinson and Grist, Messrs Cooper and Griffiths.

Course of conduct How indeed was such a course of conduct which might well have amounted to misprision of a felony, to be explained? he asked.

He said that a statement made by Low to the police was made entirely for the purpose of procuring a conviction against Mr. Lam. "It was a statement made by a former interpreter with Wilkinson and Grist, at present serving a four-year sentence for conspiracy, larceny, and false pretences. It was this statement on which the Crown largely relied in their case against Low."

The Duke and Duchess of Windsor.

Are the Duke and Duchess welcome in Windsor?

A wealthy publisher said today he intends to petition the Queen for a Royal proclamation that the Duke and Duchess of Windsor are welcome to live in Britain.

London, Jan. 29. "This is to be a plea for tolerance," said Mr. Donald Barrington-Hudson, who lives near the Thames-side town of Windsor and will stand for Parliament as a Liberal in the next election.

Mr. Barrington-Hudson, 52, said he will seek the approval of his local Liberal Party branch for a door-to-door campaign through Windsor to establish whether the townspeople share his views.

"There is no doubt in my mind," he told a reporter, "that the people of Windsor—who like myself—have the utmost loyalty to the Queen—would welcome the Duke and Duchess among them."

Ross suddenly reversed his plea of not guilty this morning through Mr. W. R. C. Carr, of Carr and Co. He first pleaded not guilty before Mr. T. L. Yang on December 21.

Inspector J. R. Johnston, prosecuting, told Mr. Phillips that on December 13, defendant parked his car at Gloucester-road near O'Brien-road, and was having an argument with a taxi driver over a traffic incident.

CROWD GATHERED A crowd gathered and they began to shout in a hostile manner. This shouting "frightened and excited" defendant, who got into his car and drove away, Insp. Johnston said.

In doing so, defendant brushed a Chinese man, Hui Tse-chan, slightly injuring him. Defendant then drove off without stopping.

Later that same evening, defendant went to the Traffic Office, Hongkong, for an interview on another matter. During the interview defendant at no time mentioned or reported the accident in which the man was injured, Insp. Johnston told the court.

The inspector said that when defendant came to Hongkong he held an international driving licence. The licence had to be changed to a Hongkong driving licence after 90 days in the Colony. Defendant failed to do so.

Ross was summoned after the interview.

COST JOB In mitigation, Mr. Carr said that defendant's "illy action" in running away was prompted by the hostile action of the crowd. There was no serious injury involved when the man was hit by defendant's car, Mr. Carr said.

Mr. Carr said that defendant had built himself into a highly popular disc jockey and that the defendant had already cost him his job.

Mr. Carr then asked the magistrate to take into consideration and deal with defendant leniently.

Indian paper hits UK Press over tiger shoot

New Delhi, Jan. 29. The independent newspaper, Indian Express said yesterday that British Press criticism of the Queen and the Duke of Edinburgh over the tiger shoot was "wholly out of touch with the general Indian opinion."

Commenting on critical editorials in two London newspapers which said that the Royal tiger shoot struck a "wrong note" at the start of an important Commonwealth tour, this mass circulation newspaper said the London newspapers also "showed a singular lack of knowledge of practices prevailing in a tiger hunt."

"Has a single paper in India criticised the Royal tiger hunt? If so, we have not come across it," the Indian Express said.

Still takes place Referring to a London News paper's criticism that a tiger hunt was "the very symbol of former colonialism," the paper said: "The English shahs and therefore, particularly despised in modern India," the India Express said: "A great deal of tiger hunting still takes place in independent India."

"Naturally it is not the sport of villagers, for it is a costly business to hunt tigers. To insinuate that a tiger hunt would remind us of the days of British rule and that it should have been avoided at all costs is to verge on the ridiculous."

"In fact independent India prides itself in having retained much that was worth keeping when India was under alien rule."

No ban "Today there is no ban of tiger hunting on the ground of it being the 'very symbol of former colonialism' it is regarded as a sport and often a necessity," the Indian Express added.—China Mail Special.

Hole blasted in British tanker

London, Jan. 29. Explosions ripped a gaping hole in the side of the British tanker Esso Durham 100 miles west of Gibraltar today.

The ship was reported steaming slowly towards Gibraltar at five knots.

The tanker's owners, Esso Petroleum Co., reported one man was injured in the chain of blasts that rocked the 23,802-ton ship.

The Esso Durham was sailing from a British refinery to Kuwait in the Persian Gulf at the time.

Messages reaching the Esso company in London from the crippled tanker did not say what caused the blast. But a spokesman said that as the tanker is carrying only ballast there is a danger of explosion from oil fumes.—AP.

BANK SHARES JUMP $100

For the second time since its favourable report was made known last week, Hongkong Bank shares jumped $100 on the local Stock Exchange this morning.

Opening business at $1,710, Banks reached a peak of $1,800 before closing this morning at $1,780.

On Friday, Banks had closed at $1,700. A total of 194 shares were sold at rates varying between $1,710 and $1,800.

A sharebroker said the big leap in price was a follow-on to Bank's night revealing record profits, increased dividends, and the splitting of the present shares into five smaller shares.

ELECTRICS DECLINE As a result of government's rejection of the plan submitted by the two electric companies, Hongkong Electric shares declined by $2, closing at $30.

China Lights dropped by $2.40, closing at $28.60. Both shares gained ground as business progressed this morning. Electric had opened at $29.14, while Lights had opened at $27.74.

There was another good turnover this morning—the total reaching approximately $4,700,000.

Murray Pde Ground test-boring

Test-boring to find out about the nature of the sub-soil on the Murray Parade Ground parking site is going on in preparation for a possible new telephone exchange in Central District.

The composition of the sub-soil has a bearing on cable laying.

The exchange may be accommodated in the basement of the five-story car park planned for the site.

A new exchange in Central District will be necessary in view of the foreseeable development in the Naval Dockyard land soon to be auctioned, the Marco Polo Hotel and the many new office buildings in the vicinity.

The Hongkong Telephone Co. Ltd had no comment on the subject as there are several alternative sites for the new exchange.

It was understood that no decision had been taken on the new exchange, and that the project was still in the consideration stage.

Britain and Channel Islands hit by snow and gales

London, Jan. 29. Snow, sleet, fog and rain endangered shipping and transport caused widespread damage and disrupted Saturday afternoon sports in Britain. The Channel Islands yesterday. A grounded Aster aircraft was damaged at Saint Helier, Jersey, when a gust of wind lifted it by the tail and slammed it down.

British Railways now 4,000-ton mail steamer, Oceana, with 28 passengers, damaged a "landing stage" when a shock rope parted as she was being towed by the tug, the British ship narrowly missed the British Railways ship, the Redoubt, which was also damaged at Saint Helier, Jersey, when a gust of wind lifted it by the tail and slammed it down.

British Railways, 28, was lowered to a barge to escape a puppy trapped there. He was blown from the barge and he tried to jump the animal. ## DUAL SYSTEM

Mr. Roy Reelson of the Bankers' Trust Company (who was ahead of Mr. Henry Alexander in suggesting the ban on Americans holding gold) now argues that gold could be confined to Central Banks and Governments and denied to speculators and hoarders.

In that case, the free price could presumably break, right away, and the fixed price, as London bankers took the American ban as a step towards just such a dual price system, wherein gold already denied to OEEC meeting was criticized.

Unfortunately, the pressure on the dollar cannot be dismissed as an hallucination and America cannot follow Britain in accepting the external discipline. There is something wrong with the world's present external discipline. It is becoming more and more a beguiling sports of such things.

They are not all over.

Remember, the adoption of Mr. Reelson's own proposal for denying gold might be just the first step towards a dual price system, and a development, rumormongers say, that would be fatal for the gold market and, therefore, China's gold exports.

Worried mothers express fear for children MURDERS SHOCK BRITAIN

Pressure put on Govt to take firmer action

London, Jan. 29.

Agitation in Britain to deal more firmly with murderers—to hang more of them—is growing as the country's murder rate rises alarmingly.

In 23 days of 1961, for which statistics are complete, there have been 17 killings, some of them murders of revolting character. The killings are going on—at least four within the week in the metropolitan area of London—and police feared that the total for the month will be about 25.

Scotland Yard has run short of its former special investigators of murder mysteries. There are calls from all over the country for the skilled detectives.

England is shocked particularly by the murders of young girls who are being waylaid while walking or playing alone, and are raped and killed.

Under present British law the rapist who kills does not hang unless a curious twist of the homicide statute—he also robs his victim.

There is increasing pressure on the Home Office and the Minister who made it, Mr. R. A. Butler, to make killing in the course of rape a capital offence. Members of Parliament, many of whom favour complete abolition of capital punishment, are hearing from worried mothers. Many are escorting their children to schools, and calling for them, and fear to send youngsters on errands that take them out of sight.

"Every parent in the land is alarmed," said Mr. Charles Curran, a Conservative MP "murder" is booming in this country."

Mr. Curran believes that the distinction which makes the rapist-killer subject to the death penalty only if he also robs his victim is "a piece of gruesome nonsense and it ought to be swept away."

Members of the gang which last week held up a London bus and assaulted a guard taking money to a bank are subject to the death penalty if caught because the man they injured died.

But poisoners, and men who club their wives to death, need not fear the hangman. The Homicide Act which became effective in March, 1957, abolished the death penalty ex-

Kennedy to outline his foreign policies

Washington, Jan. 29. President Kennedy is expected to outline his foreign and domestic policies in the "State of the Union" message which he will deliver personally to a joint session of Congress tomorrow.

In line with his belief that speeches should be as brief as possible he is likely to limit to half an hour or less his first appearance before his old Senate colleagues as the nation's chief executive.

Evidence of recent improvement in U.S.-Soviet relations will probably be reflected in President Kennedy's speech.

ON LAOS

The message will also give Mr. Kennedy an opportunity to make known his views on the Congo, Laos, relations with Cuba, possible development of a NATO nuclear deterrent, the worldwide fight against hunger and disease and aid to underdeveloped nations.

On the domestic front he is expected to review the downward trend in business, the heavy drain on U.S. dollar and gold reserves, the relatively high unemployment figures, and plans for helping the nation's depressed areas.—Reuters.

Vodka-drinking students

Warsaw, Jan. 29. Only one pupil in a hundred does not drink vodka, wine or beer in Bialystok's secondary schools, the Warsaw weekly newspaper Tygodnik Demokratyczny reported.

In the past two years 830 boys between 14 and 18 have been treated at the Bialystok public "sobering-up" station for drunks.—China Mail Special.

Kennedy puts a stop to service chiefs' foreign policy speeches

Washington, Jan. 29. All three chiefs of staff of the U.S. military services have already felt the effect of the Kennedy administration's order to leave foreign policy out of their speeches, it was learned today.

Under the order tightening the Eisenhower administration's speech clearance procedure, some prepared talks by top generals and admirals are being sent to the White House for review.

In the past European leaders have often criticized outspoken comment by U.S. military men on foreign policy issues.

President Kennedy is known to be anxious that there should be no unauthorized talk or anti-Soviet tirade which might tend to upset U.S.-Soviet relations.

REWRITTEN

His directive became known when it was reported that a prepared speech on Friday by Admiral Arleigh Burke, the Chief of Naval Operations, long known as a free talker, had been rewritten because it dealt with foreign policy.

Today Defense Department sources said that General George Decker, Army Chief of Staff, also had a speech rewritten last week and General Thomas W. White, Air Force Chief of Staff, had a speech questioned but finally cleared.

General Decker's speech was sent back to him by a Redefinition.

LEOPARD AND CROCODILE GIVE NAIROBI A HEADACHE

Nairobi, Jan. 29.

An elusive leopard and a marathon walking crocodile are giving headaches to the Nairobi authorities.

The leopard which has already mauled two Africans about a mile from the city centre has been roaming the streets.

When it turned up at the back of a cinema, police called a game warden but the leopard escaped. The warden did not use his rifle as he could not get a close shot and was afraid of wounding the animal and making it even more dangerous.

Meanwhile a six-foot crocodile has suddenly appeared in Nairobi reservoir, a popular weekend resort for yachting, rowing enthusiasts and children, about a mile and a half from the city.

How it got there is a mystery but the Game Department believes it must have walked about two miles overland from the Athi river—a marathon feat for a crocodile.

A reward has been offered to any African who catches the reptile, but so far there have been no volunteers for the job.—China Mail Special.

Germans develop new-type light

Duesseldorf, Jan. 29. German technicians have developed a method of turning electricity into light without the use of normal bulbs or neon tubes, the Chemical Industry Association announced here.

The new process, known as electro-luminescence, makes use of chemically treated cellulose as a carrier for pigments which glow when subjected to electric current.

The association said present uses were limited to low-power lighting for instrument panels and night lights, possible developments, however, include electric advertising signs and an adaptation to make the process of use in storing electricity for hearing aids and radio and television sets.—China Mail Special.

China adopts mild tone towards new President

Tokyo, Jan. 29. China yesterday for the first time reacted with a mild tone to President Kennedy's intention to work with Russia and other nations toward world peace.

The official New China News Agency belatedly commented on the President's first Press conference given three days ago but there was no trace of the usual bitter charges made against U.S. leaders.

Not once was he charged with imperialism, war-mongering or colonialism.

Only a week ago, the same news agency, which reflects thinking of the Peking regime, charged that President Kennedy's plea for the Communists to join him in a "quest for peace" was an inaugural speech "like the one Eisenhower made when assuming the presidency...."—AP.

WHEN professional beggar Saverio di Mastro's son, Pasquale, 20, was married, Saverio told him and his wife they could live in his wife's home as long as he was away begging in other cities.

Pasquale and his bride threw out a decrepit straw mattress on which Saverio had been sleeping. Now Saverio, back from his trip, is prostrate with shock. The mattress had £400 of Saverio's savings in it.

Breakaway Labour Party group supports Lumumba

London, Jan. 29. Support for deposed Congo Premier Patrice Lumumba was called for by "Victory for Socialism," a breakaway section of the British Labour Party, at its annual conference here today.

The group which is led by Labour Member of Parliament Mr. Sidney Silverman, expressed concern about the impending withdrawal from the Congo of some Afro-Asian forces and the warning of the United Nations Secretary General that this withdrawal might cause civil war in the Congo.

DENIAL

Labour Member of Parliament Mr. Kenneth Zillman described the Congolese President Joseph Kasavubu as a "former tribal chieftain," army leader Joseph Mobutu as a "military adventurer" and Kalangua premier, Mr. Tshombe as the "Belgian Zombie Tshombe."

Mr. Silverman denied that the "Victory for Socialism" movement was a breakaway or subversive organisation. "We have no interest in splitting, dividing or weakening the Labour Party; our purpose is the exact opposite of this," he said.

The movement strongly supports the unilateral disarmament of Britain, as a step toward world disarmament.—Reuters.

All dead in lost plane

Djakarta, Jan. 29. Ground parties have reached the wreck of an Indonesian airliner which crashed in west Java hills on January 24 and have reported that all the 21 persons aboard were dead.

The airliner, belonging to the Garuda Indonesian Airways, went missing on the Djakarta to Bandung section of a scheduled flight from the capital to Solo, in central Java.

The 10 passengers in the aircraft included five foreigners. According to Garuda, they were Mr. Anthony Hasdock-Hill, a British professor working in Sydney, Mr. Oswald Singapore manager of Swiss Airways; Mr. Werner Brauning, East German Vice-Consul in Djakarta; Mr. Norbet Ward, an employee of the American International Co-operation Administration from Hamilton, Ohio, and a Mr. J. J. van Westering.

SEARCH

The hunt for the aircraft was started on the morning of January 24 shortly after it vanished among the rain-shrouded volcanic peaks north-west of Bandung.

Yesterday scattered wreckage of the plane was sighted by an air force Cessna spotter aircraft 6,000 feet up in the Burnang Hills and a ground party reached the scene today.

"All the crew members and passengers were dead," an official statement said later.

According to air force sources, the Dakota was climbing through a cloud when it disappeared and was believed to have been driven straight into the rock-walled ridge.—Reuters.

Special stamps

Taipei, Jan. 29. The Chinese Nationalist postal authorities announced today they would issue on February 1 a special series of stamps depicting some of the more notable art treasures brought to Formosa before the Chinese Communists overran mainland China in 1949.

The stamps, which will be in colour, will include the picture of a vase dating from the Shang dynasty (B.C. 1701-1111).

The vase is among 253 treasures scheduled to be sent to the United States for exhibition.—AP.

DR EDITH SUMMERSKILL: SHE HIT POLITICS LIKE A WHIRLWIND!

SHE wore hats and she hated boxing. It could be the epitaph on one of the most controversial figures of the British political scene—Dr Edith Summerskill. Certainly it is the popular image. Her hats are her pride and joy, and gratefully acknowledged by cartoonists.

And how she hates boxing.

At the mention of the word she comes out of her corner throwing verbal punches from all angles. Medically, socially, mentally and physically she thinks it evil in every way.

She has long campaigned against it, written a book concerning it and now seeks to introduce a Bill into Parliament to get boxing banned in the country of its birth.

But if posterity dismisses her as a hat-wearing boxing-hater, then, posterity will not do her full justice.

This former chairman of the Labour Party and former minister of the Crown has worked for many causes and crusaded on many fronts.

She is a whole-hearted champion, no half-measures, no compromises. So when she expounds—and it is difficult to stop her expounding—it might be on such subjects as health, child welfare, motherhood, food, Suez, women's rights and men's duties.

Philosophy

Her hatred of boxing symbolises her philosophy of life—a belief in peace and understanding. And so, in a way, does her taste in hats, which ranges from the severe to the outrageous. It reflects a belief that women are there to be taken notice of.

Her anti-boxing crusade is not solely directed at saving fighters from being hurt. She is concerned about their welfare but her main worry is the effect of boxing on its followers.

What really appeals her is that television has brought the brutality of boxing into living rooms where conscientious mothers are striving to teach children the importance of kindness, sympathy and understanding.

Dr Edith feels that such feelings are not inspired by the only sport in which the participant seeks to knock out his opponent in the shortest possible time. The only sport in which wounds inflicted and blood drawn gives colour, zest and a sadistic thrill to the whole performance.

The object

Why pick on boxing? protest its supporters. What about other sports in which people get hurt?

Dr Summerskill answers: "The primary object in football is to score goals, and not to render your opponent insensible. I have never heard of a punch-drunk rugby footballer."

And what about other blood-spilling television programmes? What about them, indeed? The crusading doctor denounces them all.

Is it not in man's nature to fight? It is indeed, but Dr Edith doesn't think any more of man for it. She describes fighting in all its forms as "primitive expression of the aggressive instinct which civilised people should control as they seek to control other instincts."

Men, she feels, are not capable of imposing this control and it is fortunate for the world that women are on hand to do it for them.

'Schoolboys'

In a speech at a House of Commons dinner she described men as "overgrown schoolboys." They need women to show them the right way to do things. "One could almost hear the rattle of the chains that once bound suffragettes to Parliament's railings."

But Dr Edith does not entirely blame men for what they are. Addressing the Married Women's Association she told mothers that they were spoiling their sons.

"The lounging creature with his feet on the mantelpiece is the product of the adoring mother. He is going to be a less satisfactory husband than one who has helped with the family chores."

"It's no use your looking astonished," she told an audience that plainly was astonished.

By
Simon Kavanaugh

"You are producing this spoiled person and it's up to you to change him."

She herself is a mother with two children, Michael and Shirley.

Shirley is carrying on her mother's work—on the medical side—and in her mother's name, Michael is a barrister.

For Dr Edith, arch-enemy of boxing, has like many boxers a fighting name. She is married to Harley-street physician Dr Jeffrey Summerskill. But this champion of women's rights feels that the married woman of independent mind should wear her maiden name as a token of her individuality. She not only uses her maiden name but has inspired her children to use it.

Dr Summerskill was more than a willing accomplice. He was the prime mover in the matter.

Not all of the medical family Summerskills have always felt particularly honoured that the family name should be automatically associated with this particular female member of the line.

They felt especially keenly about it in January 1957 when her nephew Dr W. H. J. Summerskill complained: "We get all the backwash of her indiscretions."

Exasperated

And her exasperated surgeon brother, Mr. Hedley Summerskill, declared that the family had been drawn into controversy concerning Dr Edith's "recent unpatriotic activities."

The "unpatriotic activities" came at the time of Suez. Following up her dictum that "sport is the physical violence marks the immature individual and nation," Dr Edith denounced Britain's attack on Egypt.

On visiting Egypt soon after the Suez campaign she heard allegations that wounded Egyptians had not been given proper medical attention by the British.

She said later that when on a night-seeing tour she was asked by a guide what her nationality was she could not bring herself to answer.

"For the first time in my life," she said, "I had not answered immediately on being asked my nationality that I was British."

She finally said she was Norwegian. She does indeed stem from Nordic stock.

This sort of speech and her anti-boxing campaign, inevitably roused headlines. And Dr Edith does not mind being in the news.

Crusader

But the headlines can obscure the crusader who took up politics because of the crooked legs of little children she attended as a doctor and because she was appalled by the infant mortality rate and the state of children's health.

That was in the early 1930's. Her sister, Mrs. Inglis (the wife of a doctor) recalls that the family went on holiday to the Continent at the time and Dr Edith practised her political speeches on the beach.

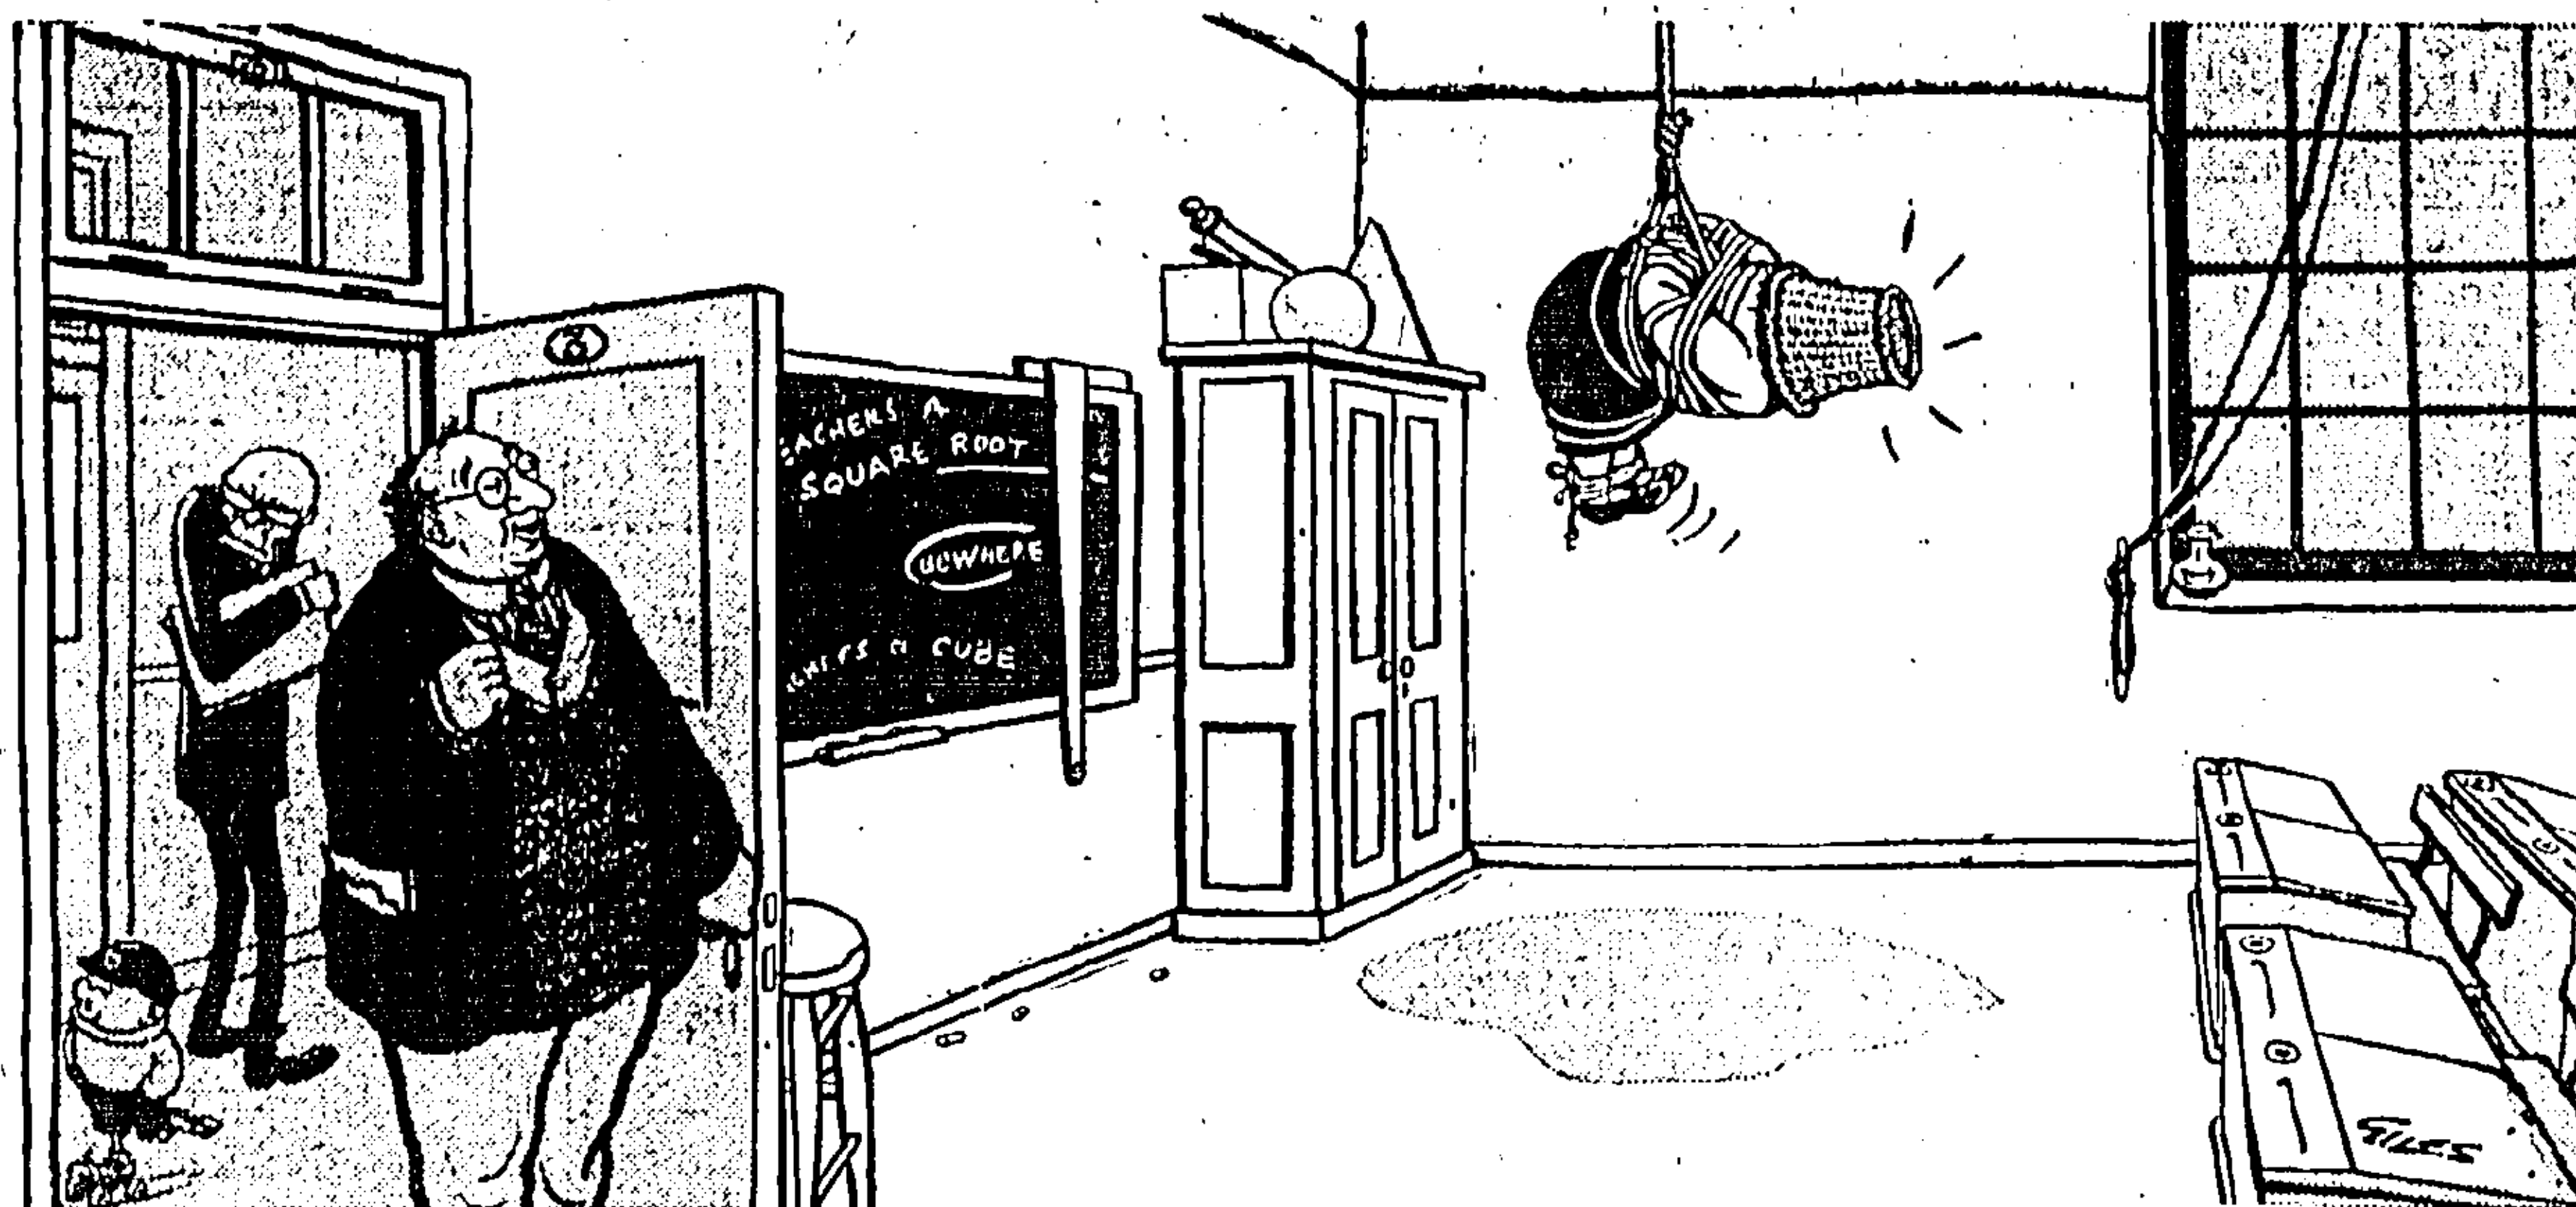

She hit politics like a whirlwind and although not successful at her first attempt, knocked 18,000 off the Conservative majority at the safe seat of Putney.

The whirlwind has not abated since she entered Parliament 22 years ago. But for all the headlines and controversy she counts as her greatest achievement getting the clean milk Bill passed in 1946, which ensures that no milk carries tuberculosis.

And in case she should be labelled a puritanical killjoy, it should be recalled that in 1959 she led a campaign, in defence of a ballet dancer banned from a church hall where she was entertaining troops because she wore a glamorous ballet dress.

This minor skirmish showed that for Dr Edith the rights of men and women are completely entwined. The girl had the right to wear the dress. But more, she felt that the soldiers had the right to see her wearing it.

"Well, how did little Miss Bluit get on with her new class?"

'HONGKONG—CITY OF VICE, DIRT, VIOLENCE AND GIRLS'

... Or, at least, according to these movie moguls

HONGKONG is on the film map, mark that plain. Ever since Clark Gable was here to make "Soldier of Fortune," the cameras have cranked faster and faster.

Every week films about Hongkong are splashed onto the screen, mostly in black and white, eschewing the Colony's scenic beauty, and emphasising, exaggerating, or imagining its vice dens, seedy streets, violence—and les girls.

Now and again, colour is used, and gaining in scenic quality what it lacks in story. A film which would be just another flop manages to limp through.

The TV films are getting in on the act. In the U.K. viewers have been following the exploits of a certain imaginary Police Inspector of the Hongkong Force, quite a lad and a terror to the local boys who go "chasing the dragon."

Most of these films are made without ever sending a unit out here. There are miles of what the trade calls stock shots, not only in the studios, but along such places as Wardour-street where films of almost anywhere in the world can be purchased and fitted in the film to give it local atmosphere. The rest of the film is shot in the studio.

Some of these films are so feeble that they are not worth mentioning, so weak that they would fall off our local screens. Yet, on the other hand, it is quite possible that people who have never moved about the world will accept Hongkong at the value of these pictures.

I doubt very much whether we shall see the film Hammer has made for Columbia called

The triads

Then I don't know whether they will let us see the "Terror Tower of Hongkong." This comes from Hammer also, and deals with the Triads, but it does not call them that, preferring to use the more widely understood term, Tong.

Hammer have not said much about the film, so I do not know whether they have it ready yet, so I cannot tell how much is fact and how much is fiction about the picture.

But in spite of the coming and going of film units, producers, directors, and the executives of Hollywood, a good film about Hongkong has yet to be made.

"Soldier of Fortune" was a feeble thing, and in the mutilated form in which we saw it locally, was not worth going to see.

Han Suyin's keen glances and candid remarks about the Colony setup in her "A Many Splendoured Thing" fared little better. You can no more get a piece of writing like that turned into a film script than you can fly.

In spite of the early remarks made locally, it is a remarkable piece of writing, showing great sensitivity and remarkable powers of description.

Commerce demanded the pre-filming of "Love" to her chosen title, and of course, a song went with it. "Love is A Many Splendoured Thing" was a feeble thing as a film.

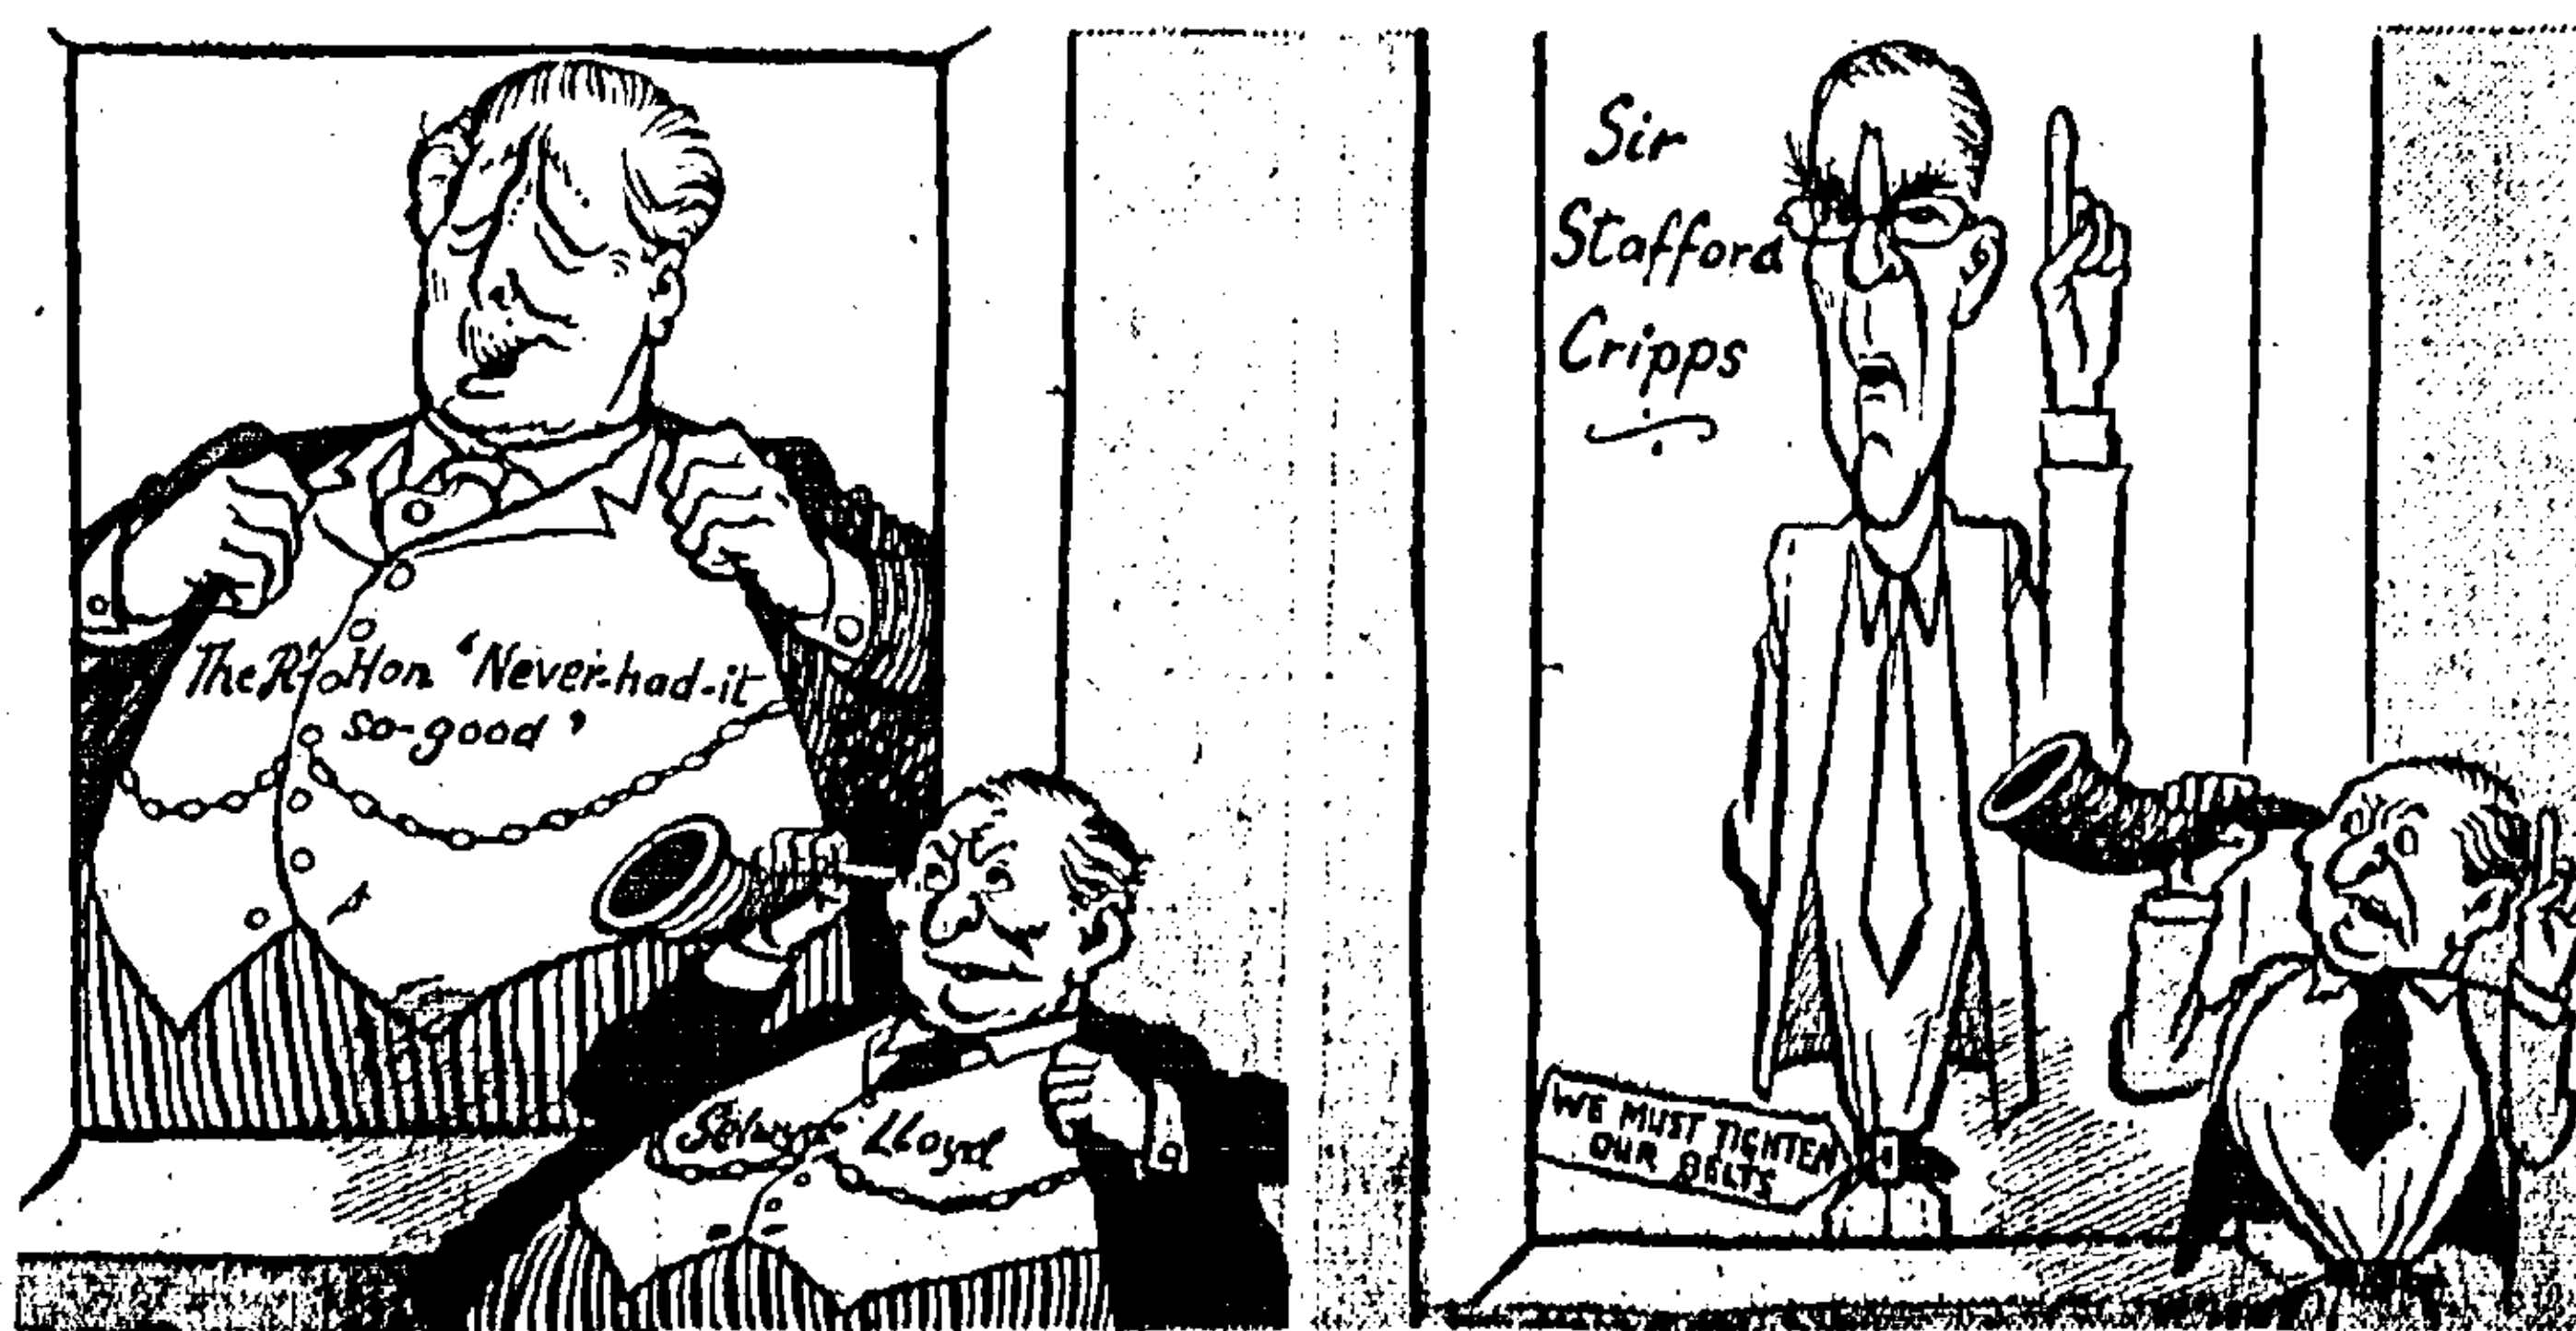

"Ferry to Hongkong" What a flop that was! Two of the world's highest-paid actors, Curt Jurgens and Orson Welles, colour, no expense spared—and then the result! Funny thing though. After the London critics gave it a pasting, it picked up quite a lot of money. But as a film of Hongkong . . . too feeble for words.

Now "The World of Suzie Wong." I thought we were going to get it for Chinese New Year, but unless the theatres change their bookings, we are not. I tried, but I just could not get through Richard Mason's book. Yet I liked his "The Wind Cannot Read" as a book, but thought it most disappointing as a film. But the sentimental prostitute . . . In Wanchai . . . Now, I ask you!

THIS is Clark Gable asking Susan Hayward to cut the cake which celebrated the completion of "Soldier of Fortune." Gazing into the camera is Buddy Adler, who then directed the fortunes of 20th Century Fox. Sad to think that only last year, Clark Gable acted as a pall bearer for Buddy Adler, and then was himself taken to his grave.

John Wayne

They tell me that John Wayne is coming out here. I do not know whether he has a script or is just searching for ideas.

Summing up, then, there has not been a good film made about Hongkong. And the way these knowalls from Pinewood and Hollywood are going about it, there never will be until they get a good script.

Now I'll tell you something. There are stories about Hongkong, more romantic and more exciting than anything written by Robert L. Stevenson. There are about three wonderful love stories which go back to the Colony's early days. Galle gives a kind of a hint, although he is writing about Macao, on page 20 of "Foreign Mud."

The trouble is, the film makers arrive with certain fixed ideas. Every house has got to be loaded with bend curtains or ivory pillars. Every bar has to be filled with smart air hostesses standing along a few Wanchai beaches.

And when I said to one director that his idea of a modern Hongkong office, approached, according to the film, through piles of cabbage leaves and fish heads, up a dirty flight of stairs where all kinds of scruffy layabouts were smoking opium, he said that if he did not make it that way, none outside of Hongkong would believe it was Hongkong. He's probably right, at that!

The local film people won't touch anything beyond domestic dramas of Hongkong, although Motion Pictures and General Investment are tackling a real subject at last with their "Sun, Moon, and Star." This has China, not Hongkong, as its background, and tackles the problems of World War II.

But regarding local and current affairs, all the studios give the thumbs down. They want no truck at all with our history, development, or international problems.

So, who is going to write the first great script based upon Hongkong? And what is it?—who is going to turn it into a really good film?

BARBARA GRIGGS, in Florence for the fashion shows, reports on the latest trends

THE VENEZIANI LINE IS A STAR TURN

Florence. FLORENCE'S fashion week, like Paris, is planned as a musical crescendo. After the weekend chopsticks of boutique and beachwear, we got down to serious business the other day with the first four haute couture collections: Corosa, Marucelli, Antonelli and Veneziani.

Of these four, only Veneziani can be seriously considered as high fashion by international standards. Antonelli and Corosa have heaps of ideas, flashes of inspiration and plenty of potty thoughts. Marucelli is frankly designed to gratify the more obvious taste of the buyers who throng the Pitti Palace, to drop in on Florence for a spot of glitter and sensation.

Sugar pink

Corosa and Veneziani showed one of the prettiest thoughts to emerge from the day's showing: the lightweight wool coat with a contrast wool lining and a dress to match the lining. Corosa lined a sage-green coat with sugar pink and put a sugar pink dress beneath it.

And Veneziani showed a whole series—sugar pink coat lined with peacock brown over a donkey brown dress; deep pink-lined coat over a pale pink suit; scarlet coat lined with navy worn with a navy two-piece; a donkey brown coat lined with white wool, worn with a white wool two-piece.

Suits of the lightest possible weight and flutty texture lending themselves to pleating are already obviously destined to play a juvenile lead in the summer's 1961 fashion story.

Corosa used an orange and lemon abstract print in fine silk for a straight short-sleeved top worn over a finely pleated skirt and showed it under a coat of bold orange—another likely 1961 style.

Marucelli used bright orange silk for a blazer and pleated skirt outfit, while Veneziani used yards of lightweight silk in abstract prints for a whole series of the short sleeved pleated dresses which Christian Dior could always be relied on to include in his summer collection.

Italian décolletées are rarely as disturbing as French ones. This time they are almost nonexistent.

Forget about the flower-prints. Italy, at any rate, has put them into cold storage for this season.

Solid colours of pink, sage green, orange, crocus yellow and turquoise won hands down and the few prints shown were nearly all abstract—many of them with a motif so scattered they almost counted as plain colours anyway.

Star turn of the day: Veneziani whose line was slim and simple by day, girlishly flattering and feminine by night in chiffon or marocaine.

Triumph

Triumph of her collection, I thought (certainly the garments I'd wish to own myself) was the series of short-sleeved straight coats simple as those of a sophisticated schoolchild in bright pretty wools worn over a matching dress in linen or shantung each of which was a belted chemise.

I also liked the marshmallow pink wool over pale pink shantung with a shiny straw hat to match.

Variations on the short-sleeved coat theme straight, low-bellied coat dresses in fine wool, and print silks worn over matched chemises.

Topping the pretty young clothes were huge, plain, extinguisher hats in glossy straw, always in the same colour as the coat and often with a charming bit of nonsense—a silk in abstract prints for a whole series of the short sleeved pleated dresses which Christian

Mothers of the moment: they should be in the Lords

IT does seem as though the British have some odd ideas when it comes to elevating women. Dr Edith Summerskill, for instance, who has been raised to the Peerage, says and does the very things that raise the hackles of most British Mums.

Anyone still haggling about the use of her husband's surname while most career mothers need is someone to help with their tax problems seems monstrously old fashioned today.

ACHIEVEMENT

What we want in the House of Lords are mothers who have broken new ground with today's problems and are in a position to hand out advice all round. My short list would include MARY MILLS, wife of John Mills, the film star, and mother of three.

For realising in time that her three bright offspring were bored just eating their heads off at home and school, and giving them a feeling of achievement by enabling them to contribute to the family income.

Her advice is badly needed at the Treasury.

LESLIE CARON, French actress married to Peter Hall and mother of two small daughters.

For being the new-style career mother who takes her career-cotted young with her wherever she goes—on vacation, on holiday—and administers their feeding schedules and clothing changes according to complicated charts which would cost most mothers, let alone a glamorous actress, a fortune.

She studies local conditions like the Queen before her tour and says: "Children are very easily conditioned to travelling—it's the mothers who aren't." The Ministry of Health could benefit from her experience. RITA HAYWORTH (Something in the Senate?) For her cleverness in keeping her much publicised daughter, Yasmine out of the limelight, away from the European gay spots (could anyone do more than demand a deposit of £35,000 against her safe return every time she stepped out of America?)

GOOD JOB

With five husbands and everything against her as a mother, Rita is now reported happy at last and has made a good job of bringing up her children in a home which is secure almost to the point of dullness. She has made out of Yasmine, daughter of the late Aly Khan and now eleven, a nice normal little girl under the most abnormal circumstances possible. The Ministry of Education might be able to use her.

FAST PACE

As one who can say with Kingsley Amis "I like it here" when it comes to holidays in Britain, I have

PARENTS' PAGE

Edited by Maureen Owen

been busy with the holiday brochures.

But unless tourists go to the same place every year, it takes a few days to assimilate the finer points of your chosen resort.

Last year, for instance, we were within three days of leaving before we found the best eating-place for miles around.

Another time the children brushed themselves to pieces on a stony beach before finding a sandy cove only known to the locals.

Talking to Mrs David (Juke Box Jury) Jacobs, who lives at Angmering, Sussex, I realised that she saw her home town in a very different light from the annual holidaymaker.

"People come to Angmering expecting a quiet, unspoilt little village," she told me. "Actually I'd say the social scene is a shade faster than London."

There are three dining and dancing places (The Blue Peter is the most famous) and in the summer there's a party going on every night.

"Masses of theatrical, advertising and big business people take houses here in the summer. (Average: £25 a week)."

The beach is really all stones except for some oozy stuff at low tide. That's why so many people have swimming pools right by the sea, but the big advantage is that the beach is so huge it never gets overcrowded.

"Clothes are casual, though definitely not the 'old thing' variety. Well cut slacks and shorts. That sort of thing."

NEW PRAMS

CHOOSING a pram is almost as difficult as selecting a car these days. Every season brings a new crop of pram models to suit every type of mother, presumably babies being mostly the same shape.

If you are always going away or moving you'll need the low fold-up kind with a detachable body that can be used as a carry-cot.

If you live anywhere with stairs or narrow passages you'll need to watch the weight and width carefully.

If you're a city mother, you'll soon find that prams with a small wheel base are a nightmare for manoeuvring kerbs.

Points to watch... Springing ask for C-springs and strap suspension. Springing cannot be used by jiggling the pram handle up and down. Jointless tyres, ball bearings and good brakes will last you through more than one baby.

Make sure that the bed length is not less than 32 inches and that the hood is high enough to allow the baby to sit up properly when older. A good quality hood is essential and, most important of all—the balance should be right. Never sacrifice lightness to security.

For some reason there is a long waiting list for prams. Delivery sometimes takes as long as three or four months. Don't attempt to hurry over the actual buying though. Most salesmen rightly regard selling a pram as a very important ceremony and you will get the most wonderful treatment wherever you go.

PARENTS AND BABIES

Is telepathy the link?

By CHAPMAN PINCHER

WHAT is behind the belief of the many mothers who claim that they "instinctively" know when their children are in danger even when far away from them?

HOW is it that young babies sense if they are unwanted by parents, even though not ill-treated?

WHY do babies so often start "playing up" when their mothers plan to go out in the evening, though elaborate efforts are made to hide the fact from them?

Dr Joan Fitzherbert, a psychiatrist with long experience of children, believes she has found the answer to these questions—Mothers and their young babies unconsciously communicate with one another by telepathy to such an extent that this is the main way in which an infant learns during its early life.

"With some it appears impossible for them to have learned the true position by ordinary conscious channels."

"The most probable explanation seems to be that the resentment is due to unconscious telepathic knowledge that the adoptive mother did not bear or breast-feed the child."

The evidence suggests that if telepathy occurs it can act over any distance. So why should the mother hesitate to communicate with her child when they are separated?

The answer may be that any mother willing to give up her child to be adopted soon stops thinking about him even unconsciously. So few "waves" reach his mind.

Dr Fitzherbert suggests that telepathy occurs in all mothers and babies.

She is convinced that babies are so responsive to changes of the mother's mood that they quickly realise whether they are loved or unwanted and react accordingly.

In a medical report entitled "The role of extra-sensory perception in early childhood," Dr Fitzherbert writes—

"It is difficult to account satisfactorily for an infant's awareness of its mother's unconscious mental conflict except by the hypothesis of telepathy."

Many mothers claim that they know when anything is wrong with their children "by instinct," but this is a meaningless phrase unless it implies some "sixth sense" communication between two minds.

Continuous

If telepathy occurs at all—and there is some scientific evidence to suggest it does—Dr Fitzherbert's theory helps to explain why continuous contact with the mother in the formative years is so important for the child's mental welfare.

It may also explain why children who are adopted so often learn that their parents are not their true family and mother without being told so.

Perhaps they are unable to "tune in" to a foster-mother to the same extent as with a mother of their own flesh and blood, and consequently are starved of mental nourishment.

"Children who are believed to be unaware of being adopted often show marked resentment of their adoptive mothers," Dr Fitzherbert writes.

was planted in your mind during childhood by telepathic communication from your mother who had been there or seen a picture of the place.

"Though I have been impressed by telepathy experiments in which I have taken part, and know several front-rank minds who believe the phenomenon is well proved, I do not go all the way with Dr Fitzherbert's fascinating mother-and-baby theory."

But then I am only a father. London Express Service.

Jack-In-The-Box

—Mary-Jane, The Rag Doll, Lets Him Out—

By MAX TRELL

TEDDY, the Stuffed Bear, had looked at the box—stared steadily at it—for most of the afternoon. Now and then he put his paw against it and listened.

It wasn't a very big box. It was about the size of a large match box.

Rapped on box

Teddy rapped on the side of the box just as Hand had done. Only he walked more slowly. He even looked under the box.

"Who's in there?" he called. No one answered.

Then Knarf, the Shadow Boy with the Turned-About Name, came along. And a few feet away, standing by the door of the room, was General Tin, the Tin Soldier.

"Somebody's inside this box," Teddy told them.

Never saw it

Neither Knarf nor General Tin had ever seen the box before. "Where did it come from?" Knarf asked.

Teddy shook his head. He didn't know. Neither did General Tin know.

Then Hand, the Shadow Girl, came over and looked carefully at the box. Hand walked all around it. Mary-Jane climbed all over it.

It had a catch on it," said Mary-Jane.

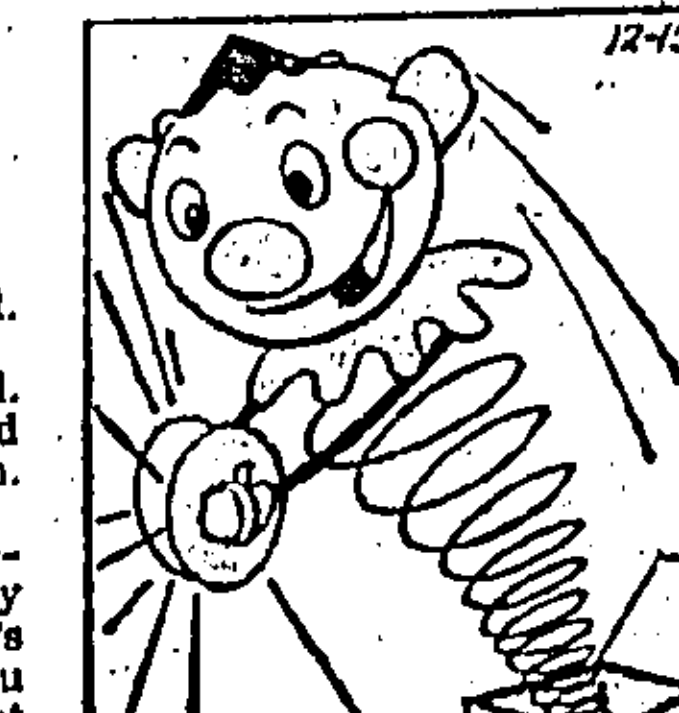

She pointed to a small hook at the top of the box.

Top must open

Then somebody said that the top of the box must come open if you touched the hook and so it did.

But no one wanted to touch it. "Somebody's in there," said "Teddy kept saying, "Hand looked at Teddy and gave him a funny smile.

"How could you almost hear anybody, you silly bear? Either

Jack clashed two cymbals together as he popped out.

"Jack-in-the-box," Mary-Jane called in again, "what are you doing in there?"

"Nothing," replied Jack. "I'm waiting to get out. That's all I ever do."

Mary-Jane touched the hook. It snapped back. The top of the box flew open. Jack popped up!

He's a clown

Jack was a clown. He had a chalk-white face and a round red nose. He clashed two cymbals together as he popped up.

He had a grin from ear to ear, straight across his face.

Everybody rushed up to say hello to him.

Mary-Jane was there first. Eut Teddy, the Stuffed Bear, was there second.

"I knew I almost heard you all this time," Teddy said.

Nothing to fear

Mr Punch and Knarf helped General Tin back on his feet. "You see? What's there to be scared of?" General Tin said.

"Hello there, Jack-in-the-box! Welcome! I'm glad you're going to stay with us—or are you?"

"Are you?" asked everybody.

"Of course!" said Jack. "I'm staying in my box. I'm also staying in this house. I'm staying in two places at the same time."

And he grinned all around the room.

YOUR CHINA MAIL HOROSCOPE

MONDAY, JANUARY 30

AQUARIUS (January 21-February 19): Take full advantage of a change in your way of life. Although it may mean harder work, the results will be that much more satisfactory.

PISCES (February 20-March 20): A tie with a very close friend seems to be weakening, but no blame attaches to anything you have done.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A business trip will enable you to visit a relative whom you have little opportunity to see otherwise.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): This ought to be a propitious day for you to conclude a business deal which has been awaiting your final decision.

GEMINI (May 21-June 21): The chance of a romantic association with a person you have recently met is not too promising, and you should try to divert your thoughts to someone worthier of you.

CANCER (June 22-July 21): Refrain from using any funds for speculation today, and keep away from gambles of any kind, even where money is not involved.

LEO (July 22-August 21): A social contact may not be very enriching emotionally, but could pave the way to a more satisfying community life.

VIRGO (August 22-September 22): You may be distracted from your usual routine today, but should not let it worry you. The unexpected may prove very advantageous.

LIBRA (September 23-October 22): You will have a splendid opportunity to strengthen family ties which have recently threatened to become rather strained.

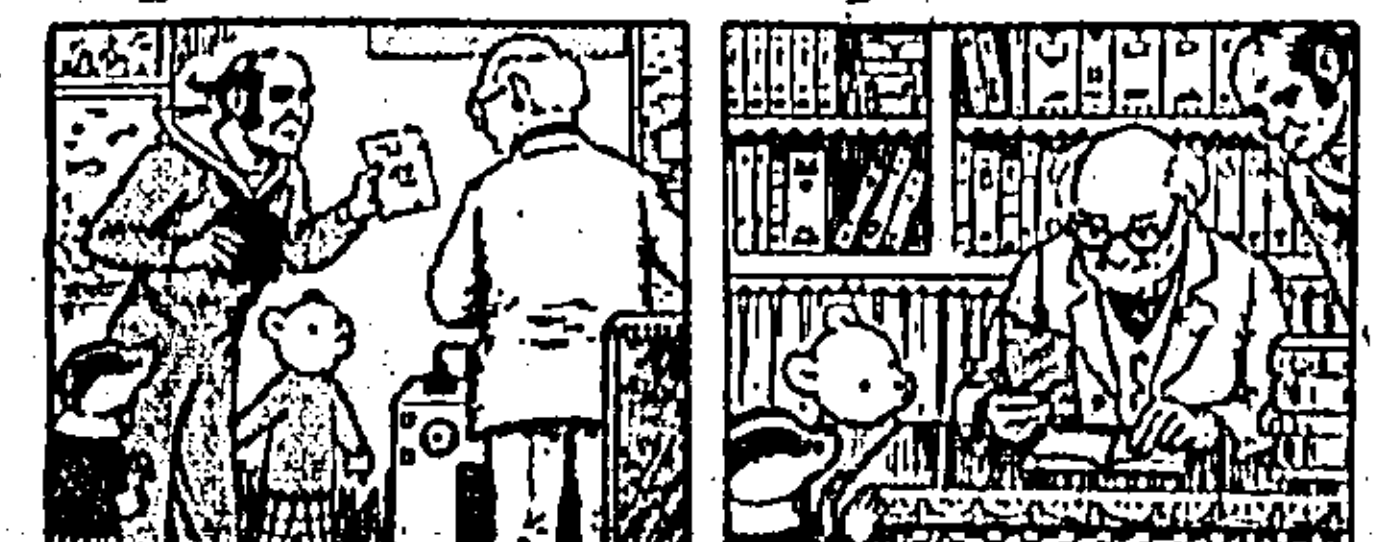

SCORPIO (October 23-November 21): Conditions are now favourable for going after the kind of recognition you so eagerly desire.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22-December 21): A comparative stranger may bring you good luck, and you should seek an opportunity to thank him in tangible form.

CAPRICORN (December 22-January 20): You will have an opportunity to meet a set of people entirely different from your usual companions, and should find it a stimulating evening.

YOUR BIRTHDAY: If your birthday is this week, you will find a symbol of good fortune in a gift of a mantle clock.

Police . . . . . 1, Army . . . . . 0 POOR, POOR STUFF

*A Police-Army match that never reached
up to expectations*

By I. M. MacTAVISH

A fine display by goalkeeper Cheung Kwok-kin: a safe-as-houses showing by stopgap pivot Yuen Hoi-ping: a courageous solo performance by little never-say-die Dixon: one delightful touch of spontaneous sportsmanship by Owen: and—in spite of a lot of adverse and noisy comment from a section of the crowd—a competent piece of whistling by referee Petrie . . . and there you have the only redeeming features of as dull a first division soccer match as we shall have to suffer this season.

Nearly six thousand fans were present at Boundary-street yesterday afternoon. They saw Police collect two points on the strength of the only goal of the afternoon against an unhappy aimless Army side that failed miserably to live up to its recently acquired reputation . . . the whole six thousand spectators should be called as witnesses for the prosecution of both sides.

Police were hardly one degree better than the opposition but they produced occasional brief bouts of cohesion and these were enough to tilt the scales in their favour.

The game was one long dreary chapter of errors and there was a spell midway through the second half when it was difficult to know which way some of the Army players were kicking.

Comic touch

Bagley and Lowther once, and Johns twice had a bang at the ball in the general direction of their own goal. There was a comic touch of the ack-ack brigade about Bagley's elevated wallop which landed among the fans away behind the goal. For a time it looked as though we were getting a ration of fifth column stuff in the military defence area.

Police got the two points reward for their victory. No doubt they felt very happy about the result for they had to take the field without their captain and centre-half Kung Wah-kit who was unfit . . . but they cannot feel very happy about the general performance of the side as a whole.

The forward line again hit rock bottom. Mak Wing-hung could do little right and Cheung Shiu-keung—who will surely develop into a top class player—spent as much time looking for a colleague to pass to as he did beating opponents with the ball. If the line was upset by positional changes after Chan Ting-nam was injured and went onto the right wing with Ng Chak-lau moving back into the half-back line and winger Ng Chow-wing taking on something of a roving commision.

Didn't stop trying

Evans—skipper for the day—generally had the beating of Lowther but during direct and half he and Cheung Shiu-keung wandered far too much and there was often a great gap where the left wing pair should have been.

Little tough-as-a-tank Tsang Wah never stopped going forward with the ball. He got a word of caution from the referee early in the game for a foul on Johns but it was no fault of his that the game was such a dismal let-down. He never stopped trying.

Toledo looked very much at home in his favourite right-back position and his partner Cheng Wing-kan had his easiest afternoon of the season against MacFarlane who apart from one shot on the run in the first half showed little interest in the proceedings. It is very difficult to pinpoint the weakness in the Inept Army side. They started off in rank bad style and they never really recovered.

Kealey escaped criticism, although he must have been on edge with the uncertainty of the men in front of him. His clearing of the ball was accurate and intelligent.

Lowther is still out of touch. He had two chances to clear the ball before the police got their goal but he hesitated and missed both of them.

It was good to see Turner having another steady outing but it is a long time since the Army's powerful middleline has been so poor.

They had very little to worry about with the Police attack yet they contrived to make things as difficult as they could by careless distribution and claphappy passing.

Biggest sinner

The forward line was Dixon and almost nothing else. Hudson was blotted out by Yuen Hoi-ping and Owen has not been so subdued since he came into the Army side.

The biggest sinner of the soldiers' side, however, was left winger Sykes who had enough chances to win the game several times over. Each time he hesitated and even when presented with a clear goal he failed to take it. At the end, he snuffed a glorious chance to equalise.

It was said that MacFarlane was unfit and should not have played. That may account for his shacking afternoon . . . but it was not an alibi for the team particularly as a fully fit right-winger gave a fine display in the reserve side. There is no place for an unfit player on the field and yesterday the Army paid dearly for the calculated risk which they took with the right-winger.

The game was played in beautiful spring sunshine but the hard ground and the light lively ball made accurate control very difficult. Contrary to expectations the early exchanges were all in favour of the Police and twice Ng Chak-lau was just wide with good drives before Evans slipped round Lowther and laid on a fine cross for Toledo. The little fellow timed his shot perfectly but Kealey tipped the ball over the top in fine at 1c.

Unlucky 13

At the other end Dixon was only inches out with a good shot and almost immediately afterwards Owen joined the ack-ack boys with a shot that flew high and wide.

The thirteenth minute was unlucky for Dixon when he got his head to a shot by Johns and just failed to divert it into the net.

In spite of these sporadic raids by the Army the Police were much more persistent in their efforts, however, the standard of football was very low and attacks and clearances were more often due to mistakes by the opposition than anything else.

Dixon was the only livewire in the Army front rank and twice in quick succession Cheung Kwok-kin had to look lively to stop him from finding the net.

In the 24th minute Chan Ting-nam had to leave the field for medical attention to a facial injury. He appeared to have quite a "shiner" and was reported to have had two stitches in the wound after the game was over.

Hudson dropped a very awkward job just over the Police bar and for a few moments the Army staged a sustained attack which was more enthusiastic than thoughtful and it ended with an angular shot which missed the goal and curled right across the field and into touch. Kealey was warned for a hacking tackle on Johns but it didn't upset him and he was back in the firing line a few minutes later. His long range shot was just wide. Dixon should have scored at the other end and when the ball went to Sykes, he smacked it over the top.

In the 40th minute Tsang was back in the picture. He slipped a neat pass to Ng Chak-lau who swept it quickly out to Evans. The winger carried the ball close to the bye line without being dispossessed and eventually from an acute angle he drove a ground shot through a forest of legs and into the net to put the Police ahead.

MacFarlane made his solitary contribution to the game just before the interval when he hit a tremendous drive towards goal to make a brilliant diving save to push the ball round the post. The second half started on a troubled note . . . at least for Ng Chak-lau who was very correctly booked by the referee when he was caught red handed in an act of retaliation.

Finest gesture

The general standard of play was little better than it had been during the first half and Police were unlucky not to go further ahead when Cheung Shui-keung beat Kealey all ends up only to see his shot rebound from the crossbar.

In the 54th minute we got the game's finest gesture . . . yet I doubt if it was noticed by very many in the crowd. The Army were awarded a free-kick just outside the police penalty area and Owen fired a tremendous shot towards the corner of the net. It looked as if over a goal but Cheung Kwok-kin dived flat out to clutch and hold the ball in spectacular fashion. As the goalkeeper moved out to finish his clearance few spotted Owen's grand little gesture of congratulations to the man who had defied his best effort to score.

Mackin saved the Army from anxiety when he kicked the ball off the goal line but Dixon was the only forward likely to do any damage at the other end. He never gave up trying to get the better of the Police defence . . . but single-handed it was too much for him. Just before the game gave Sykes a match-saver on a plate . . . and the winger made as nasty a dish of it as you could imagine . . . he should be on cookhouse fatigues for a month.

VERDICT: Not said . . .

Teams

Police: Cheung Kwok-kin, Toledo, Cheung Wing-kan, Tsang Wah, Yuen Hoi-ping, Chan Ting-nam, Ng Chow-wing, Ng Chak-lau, Mak Wing-hung, Cheung Shiu-keung, Evans.
Army: Kealey, Lowther, Turner, Johns, Bagley, Mackin, MacFarlane, Dixon, Hudson, Owen, Sykes.
Referee: Mr I. Petrie.

SENSATIONAL TEST HAT-TRICK BY LANCE GIBBS

Adelaide, Jan. 30.

A sensational hat-trick by Lance Gibbs featured this morning's play in the fourth Test. At lunch, Australia, 221 for four on Saturday, were 302 for eight in reply to the West Indies first innings total of 393 — still 91 behind with two wickets in hand. Gibbs' spectacular breakthrough came at 281. He first got MacKay leg-before for 29 after the sixth wicket stand (with Benaud) had produced 60 runs, had Wally Groot caught at first slip by Sobers for a duck, and captured his third successive wicket by clean bowling Frank Mison in his next delivery.

Brilliant catch

Gibbs achieved his feat in his third over of the morning and had then given away only four runs. The morning's play opened with a sensation as Bobby Simpson was dismissed by Wesley Hall with his second delivery before he could add to his Saturday's closing score of 85. It was a real mortar to which the batsmen got an outside edge and Alexander made a brilliant catch. Mackay and Benaud were well settled when Mackay was out. At the interval Benaud was still there with 43 and Des Hoare 10. —Reuter.

Taiwan lady softballers make impressive HK debut with 8-1 win over SCAA

By OLLY VAS

A capacity crowd who turned up at King's Park yesterday afternoon to watch the Taiwan Ken Ying Ladies Softball team's opening game must have gone away an hour and ten minutes later with pleasant memories of a fine exhibition match in which the visitors beat local champions South China by 8-1.

After the customary exchange of pennants, between SCAA's C. Y. Lam and the Taiwan team captain Tsui Lai-shuet, Mr Cheung Kam-in was called upon to pitch the first ball to open the game which was well umpired by Bill Silva with the assistance of Wally Lawrence and Baker Hussain.

Excitement was not long in coming, for after captain Tsui had started off in the top of the first by hitting a long fly to the outfield for the first 'out' of the game, third-baseman Lam Ban-ku's deceptive trickler along the first-base line had the crowd on its toes until umpire Silva conferred with Lawrence and decided to call it a foul ball. Lam then was retired on an infield grounder for the second 'out'.

Disastrous

Now it was Choi Ming-che's turn to bat and the Taiwan shortstop banged out a high ball which was allowed to ricochet between left-fielder Kwan Yick-ching and centre-fielder Helen Lung.

This turned out disastrously for SCAA for pitcher Lam Ban-ku, who had scored a pair of runs, and Choi ran to second base from which he scored on the next batter, Taiwan pitcher Lam Hing-che, whose hard-hit drive over shortstop Carmen Matos' head and Ken Ying were one run up. Cheung Lai-chit foul-tipped to close the inning.

SCAA were out in succession in their turn at bat. Helen Lung watched a third strike to go by, Matos swung at and missed a last strike and Yim seeped up.

The second inning was highlighted by Carmen Matos' fine catch of Wong Ah-mei's slow dropping ball just beyond the infield and in SCAA's turn at bat they tied up the ball game. With two outs on the scoreboard Peggy Wal just managed to beat the throw to first base from Ken Ying's shortstop Choi Ming-che and advanced a base when Kwan Yick-ching hit to the infield to put two runners on.

Next, Ellen Chen hit the ball between first and second base. It was well fielded by Ken Ying's shortstop Choi who elected to 'force' Kwan but the latter slid deftly into the base and even as Choi looked appealingly at umpire Lawrence, Peggy Wal scored an opportunistic run from third base to tie up the game. Kwan then foolishly stroled off the base on the subsequent pitch and was trapped in a run-down play.

Lam Bun-kuk's hit over second drove in a Ken Ying run in the top of the third for the visitors to lead 2-1 as the winners reduced the SCAA team in 1-2-3 fashion.

Then in the top of the fourth inning Ken Ying's left-fielder Cheung Chung-wan rounded the bases for SCAA's Kwan Yick-ching, who showed fine ball control. A brief display of tempo in the bottom of the fifth inning by SCAA pitcher Yim earned an otherwise commendable performance. Carmen Matos muffed a ball or two and she will want to forget this game whereas left-fielder Kwan Yick-ching, a very good pitcher incidentally, was hopelessly out of position and responsible for at least three of the runs scored by Ken Ying. SCAA catcher Margaret Lam's action of stepping back as if to throw the ball whenever a runner is on base, is pretty to watch but one of these days a foot-loosed runner will call her bluff. Not a base was stolen in this fast and entertaining match, such was the respect accorded to the two catchers.

WHITFIELD WANDERERS GIVE RECREIO

A RUGGER LESSON

By "PROP"

At Sookunpoo on Saturday afternoon Whitfield Wanderers beat a plucky Club de Recreio side by 29 points (four goals, three tries) to eight (a goal and a try).

This was a heavy defeat for the Portuguese boys, who should not be discouraged, for they held the Wanderers to a five-all draw at half-time.

In the second half the experience and weight of the Whitfield side were too much for Recreio who could not prevent a further twenty-five points being chalked up against them, whilst scoring three in reply.

First to score

Whitfield gathered most of their stars for this game, and included four Colony players, as well as another four who have represented the Army this year, but the Recreio boys, showing improved form from their previous games last weekend against 15th Field Regiment, were not over-awed.

For at least fifteen minutes of the first half they relied on a desperate defence to keep the Wanderers at bay, but from their own twenty-five Michael Figuereido made a break from a line-out. Beating three men with a swerving run he handed the ball to his brother who took it upfield at a good pace.

With the Whitfield defence in a tangle, Danny Figuereido handed to Alex Xavier who ran around MacDonald, and setting his teeth, pulled away from Ballille to score under the posts. Manuel Xavier kicked the goal to put Recreio into the lead.

This was short-lived, however, as Whitfield came right back into the attack. After good play by the forwards, Sims made a break and transferred the leather to Ball to give the forward an easy try. MacDonald added the points for the goal kick. The score remained the same at half-time.

More drive

On the resumption Whitfield started to put more drive into their attack and played with more purpose. The forwards were able to get a considerable share of the ball for their backs, who ran strongly. Play surged around the Recreio line, and from a scrum only five yards from their line Recreio allowed Whitfield to score an orthodox try in the opposite corner. Bills touched down, and MacDonald added the extra points.

Recreio's kicking and covering from this point onwards left much to be desired. From the kick-off, however, Recreio scored. Manuel Xavier took the kick which was in the nature of a "grubber". The ball rebounded from Hagen, and Xavier, following very fast, dribbled the ball on. With the defence closing around him, and no support at hand, he contrived to pick up the ball and show every sign of a clean pile of bones as he sprinted over to touch down under the posts. His own kick at goal was wide, but Recreio had made up a little of the lost ground.

Scoring spree

This was just about the last chance that Whitfield allowed the Portuguese boys. Throwing the ball about with admirable handling, the Whitfield side opened up the game at every opportunity, and even without Ballille who suffered a leg injury and was virtually a passenger for the last ten minutes, the three-quarters were never below strength for MacDonald joined in their passing movements time after time.

Three times from scrums close to the Recreio line the Wanderers added to their total. Ballille, Riddle and Sims being the scorers. Hagen and Smith added further tries, and MacDonald kicked two conversions to end the scoring.

Whitfield Wanderers were best served by Whalley, who was everywhere. MacDonald, Riddle, Ball and Hagen, Richards played well in the account.

For Recreio none played better than Mendes and Wilkinson in the lineout, Michael Figuereido and the two Xaviers behind the scrum.

Until the second half the Recreio side showed signs of a resurgence of form, but their fitness must be very suspect after their second-half display.

Pakistan bowl themselves into safe position

Indore, Jan. 29.

Pakistan, bundled out for 196 yesterday, howled themselves back into a safe position against Madhya Pradesh on the second day of their three-day match here.

Dismissing their rivals for 181, they scored five for no wicket in their second innings by the close to lead by 20 runs.

Fazal Mahmood, who finished with five wickets for 47 runs, started the Madhya Pradesh collapse by taking three quick wickets. Mahmood Hussain claimed three for 43.

Madhya Pradesh, 92 for two overnight, lost their eight remaining wickets for the addition of only 89. Nivarskar, unbeaten with 56 to his credit yesterday, scored only three more today. His 50 was top score.

Thunder-showers during the night prevented play being resumed before lunch.—Reuter.

Gary Player takes the San Francisco Open

San Francisco, Jan. 29.

South Africa's Gary Player blazed a six-under-par 65 in the last round today to win the $57,000 San Francisco International Open Golf Tournament with a 72-hole score of 272.

Up to the 14th hole today, Player had been trailing George Beyer, Al Geiberger and Don Whit to one stroke. Then he started his birdie spurge that brought him the $50,000 first prize and his first U.S. tournament victory since he won the Kentucky Derby Open in 1958.

Player finished two strokes in front of Beyer and Whitt who wound up with 272. Geiberger and Don January deadlocked at 275.—AP.

Hongkong retain Interport Hockey Cup

HOLD MACAO TO A 2-2 DRAW AFTER LEADING 2-1 AT HALF-TIME

By NUMPERE

At the 'Caixa Escolar' ground yesterday in the presence of the Governor of Macao, Hongkong retained the Spalding Cup by holding Macao to a 2-2 draw.

It was a very exciting tussle, in which Hongkong were predominant in the first half but Macao came back strongly and went very close to winning the game in its late stages.

The Macao forwards, particularly the inside trio of Marques, Ritchie and Jorge, always looked more dangerous than their Hongkong counterparts but the Hongkong defence stood up well with goalkeeper Kadir playing the game of his life.

Castro, who came into the side at short notice to replace Howell, fulfilled the selectors' confidence, and Valoma's positional play at right-half was excellent.

Pat Gardner, who was very closely watched, had a quiet game as did both of Hongkong's wingers, Colloco and Guterres.

Most prominent

O.K. Dallah was the most prominent of Hongkong's forwards and was unfortunate to see a reverse-stick shot go just wide early in the second half when Hongkong were leading 2-1.

From the start it was Hongkong into the attack. They forced two short corners in the first two minutes but could not press home the advantage. From the second one Oliphant shot past and from the resultant 10-yard hit the Macao forwards went through in a line, Kadir conceding a corner. From Almeida's shot, the ball was safely cleared but Macao came back into the attack and Castro put the ball behind for another corner. From this Jorge hit the post but the ball was scrambled away.

In the 10th minute Hongkong went into the lead. Silva intercepted a Macao clearance and sent O.K. Dallah away. Dallah passed to Narbu Lama who worked his way through and sent in a reverse-stick shot which goalkeeper Boyel kicked at and missed completely.

From the bully Hongkong attacked again but Guterres shot past. Play quickly switched to the other end where Pettifer conceded a short corner but, in this, the hand stop was fumbled.

Further ahead

In the 21st minute Hongkong went further ahead. Narbu Lama and Dallah combined well and a short corner was awarded for obstruction. From this Dallah pushed for Gardner to hand-stop and Oliphant to send a shot screaming into the goal.

Exchanges still continued from end to end with Hongkong having slightly the better of the play. However, Macao, went close in the 25th minute. Jorge started the movement with a neat pass and Almeida ran through but Kadir was quickly out to block the shot and clear.

Macao kept the pressure on and two minutes before half-time reduced the arrears. Ritchie obtained possession and sent a neat pass to Marques who ran through and flicked the ball past Kadir.

Half-time came with Hongkong just about deserving their 2-1 lead.

On the resumption Macao were quickly into the attack and Kadir saved well twice from Ritchie conceding a corner from the second one, but again this was ruined by a bad hand-stop.

From the hit Castro sent Gardner away who combined well with Lama and Dallah but Dallah's final shot was saved by Boyel and cleared by Berto. Again Hongkong mounted an attack through Valma and Dallah went through but his reverse-stick shot was just wide. A goal at this stage would probably have swung the game in Hongkong's favour.

Penalty bully

However, it was not to be and Macao assumed the ascendancy. In the 12th minute Oliphant conceded a short corner and Valoma did very well to get out and block Ritchie's shot.

Macao kept the pressure on and in the 15th minute Almeida's shot hit the post but was scrambled away.

So it continued and in one hectic spell in the 22nd minute Macao had three short corners. Kadir saved twice but in the third Oliphant flicked and despite K. Lall had to hesitation in awarding a penalty-bully. Marques opposed Oliphant and won the bully to level scores.

The excitement was now intense and the Macao supporters were literally screaming their side on. Umpire Lall had a word with Macao skipper Ritchie, but the players had every reason to become a little excited.

In the remaining minutes both sides gave everything they had to produce the winning goal but it was not to be and full-time came with the score level at 2-2. It was an excellent game, fast and furious and I think perhaps Hongkong were just a little fortunate to retain the trophy.

The teams

Macao: A. Boyel, A. Cordelero, A. Bosto, H. Rocha (Capt), F. Cordeiro, J. B. da Silva, L. Cunha, F. Marques, L. Ritchie, A. Jorge, A. Almeida.
Hongkong: S. Kadir, Pettifer, J. B. Oliphant, M. C. Valoma, R. A. Silva, D. Castro, J. Colloco, O. K. Dallah, N. Lama, P. Gardner (Capt), L. Guterres.

Hongkong 'B' vs Macao 'B'

As a curtain raiser to the Interport a match was played between the HK and Macao 'B' XI's. Hongkong emerged winners by 4-2.

Here again Hongkong had far the better of the first half and were 3-1 up at half-time only to fall away a little in the second half.

For Hongkong their full-backs, Gahfoor and Pannu were excellent, Gahfoor in particular breaking up many attacks with uncanny positional play.

Harris at centre-half had complete control of midfield in the first half and scored the first goal from a corner. Ryan, after a fairly quiet game, scored the best goal of the match with a fine solo effort just before full-time.

Macao were well served at full-back by Skipper Rodrigues and A. A. Silva but their forwards could not make much impression on the Hongkong defence although they had most of the play in the second half.

The game was only two minutes old when Hongkong took the lead. Ryan was obstructed when going through and from the resultant short corner Harris scored with a hard shot from Leach's pass.

Eight minutes later their second goal came, again from a short corner. This time Harris shot was parried but Hussain was quickly in to obtain possession and score.

Within four minutes Hussain had added another. Howie and Ryan combined to give Hussain his chance. He pushed the ball past goalkeeper da Silva only to see it hit the post but followed up quickly and pushed it into the empty goal.

In the 15th minute Macao were awarded a penalty-bully when Pannu infringed but Pannu cleared against H. F. Rodrigues. However, three minutes later they did reduce the arrears. F. Rodrigues gained possession of the ball and beat two defenders before flicking into the goal.

Hongkong remained on top for the rest of the first half but there was no further score before the interval.

Hongkong seemed to ease off slightly in the second half and play became rather scrappy with Macao gradually getting the better of the exchanges.

However, it was not until the 63rd minute that they could score. Then from a short corner full-back Rodrigues hand-stopped for centre-forward Rodrigues to score with a hard shot.

Just before full-time Ryan made the game safe for Hongkong with a beautiful solo effort. Picking up the ball in midfield he ran through and continued past goalkeeper da Silva before sending a reverse stick shot into the empty goal.

Hongkong deserved their success and the first half in particular was quite entertaining.

Macao 'B': J. S. da Silva, A. A. Silva, H. F. Rodrigues (Capt), F. Sequeira, F. Cunha, H. Barros, J. Ribeiro, A. Cordeiro, F. Rodrigues, F. Baptista, H. Baptista.

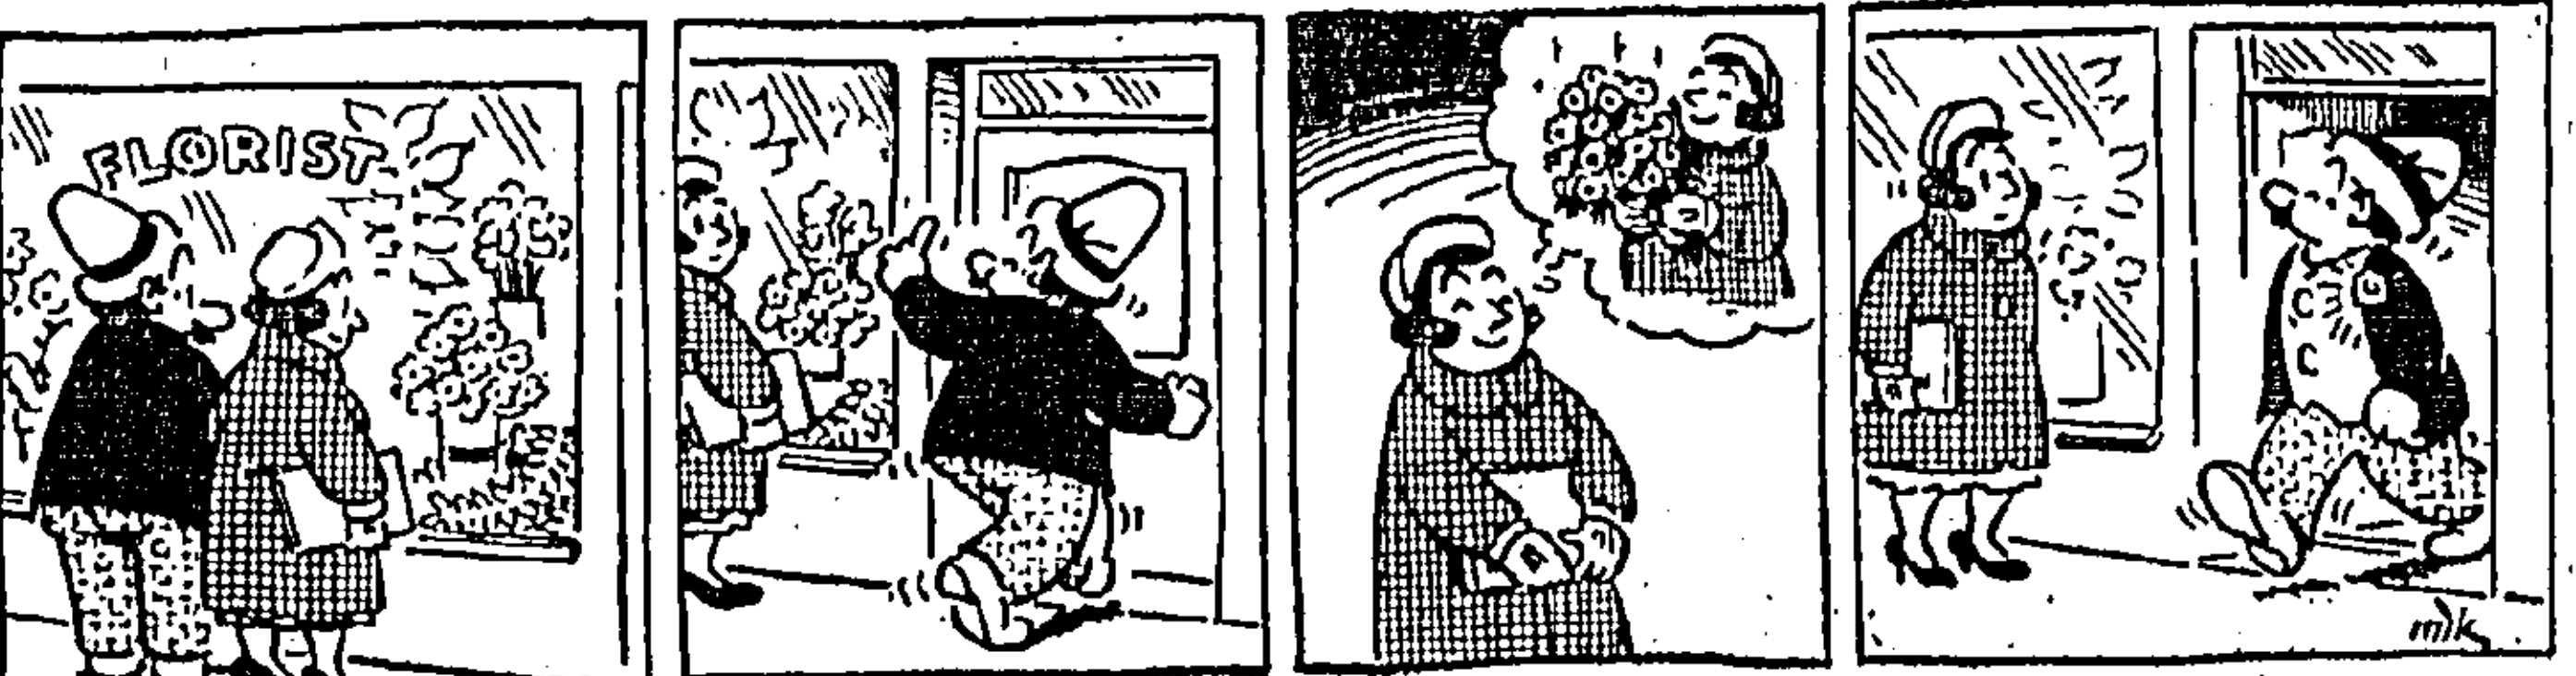

Hongkong 'B': Rahim, B. Gahfoor, G. S. Pannu, Leach, D. J. Harris, J. Macauley, G. Limbu, Humfrey, Z. Hussain, M. Ryan,

U. Singh.

In the evening the full Hongkong contingent were entertained to a very enjoyable Chinese dinner, during the course of which both the President of the Club de Macao and the Chairman of the Hongkong Hockey Association made short speeches. The general theme was of the spirit and good fellowship engendered by the Interport series and the hope that they would continue in the same vein.

Bishop opens exhibition

Bishop R. G. Hall (seen in the above China Mail picture) this morning opened the exhibition of paintings by Mr. John Huang, talented young local artist, at the Lung Kong Association hall in the United Building, Hongkong.

The opening ceremony was attended by many friends and well-wishers.

John has been dead since he was five. He is now 19.

He has painted 170 pictures in Western and Chinese style since 1955 and a selection of these made up today's exhibition, together with drawings in charcoal and crayon. John is seen standing next to Bishop Hall in the picture.

TEACHER AND STUDENTS EXHIBIT PAINTINGS

Mrs. H. Odell this morning opened an exhibition of oil paintings by Mr. Robert Lou and his students at St John's Cathedral Hall.

Mr. Lou, a young Shanghai artist who came to the Colony and started to teach here three years ago, has produced a delightful collection of portraits, floral and still life studies and works of scenic interest from the New Territories.

At the opening ceremony this morning Mrs. Odell and Mrs. Yvonne Elias wished Mr. Lou and his students every success during their three-day exhibition which closes at 5 pm on Wednesday.

CHINESE STUDENTS RESIST

Macao, Jan. 28.

A new arrival from China received today that the Chinese authorities were having trouble with continuous resistance put up by a nucleus of students in the country.

Drastic counter-measures, however, are taken by the Chinese authorities, he added.

From his direct knowledge, this arrival disclosed that right after the discovery of an incipient resistance movement on or about October last year, scores of university students were transferred to northeast China by rail without previous notice. Three months later he received a letter from his own nephew stating that the students were put to work in Azang.—A.P.

APPLICATION TO REPLACE OLD HOUSES

Two applications for exemption for five old three-story houses came before Tenancy Tribunals this morning.

Three houses at 101, 103 and 105, Shanghai-street, Mongkok, which, according to the architect, Mr. Ip Po-hay, present a fire hazard with their wooden staircases enclosed in wooden boards, were the subject of one application.

The applicant Mr. Kwong Sit, wants to demolish them and build a six-story block to contain three shops and 15 Chinese type tenement flats. The cost would be $100,000.

The applicant is represented by Mr. D. A. L. Wright, instructed by D'Almeida Remedios and Co.

Members of the Tribunal hearing this case are Mr. B. V. Rhodes (President), Mr. O. Sadleir and Mr. E. A. Thompson.

SECOND PLAN

The other application is for exemption for 293 and 295, Reclamation-street, Mongkok, where the houses are 35 years old.

The applicant, Mr. Wong Yuk-ho, who is represented by Mr. G. S. Ford, of Ford, Kwan and Co., proposes to replace the old houses with a modern block nine stories high to cost $163,888. It would contain two shops on the ground and 10 tenements on the upper floors.

Members of the Tribunal in this case are Mr. J. R. Oliver (President), Mr. J. R. E. Harrison and Mr. C. G. E. Sutton.

'CARE' plans to start work in Africa

CARE (Co-operation for American Remittances to Everywhere) is to go into Africa, said the Hongkong Representative, Mr. John L. Rhodes, this morning.

He has just returned from a Conference attended by 25 Chiefs of Mission in New York where this decision to extend help to Africa was taken.

It was agreed to give pioneer assistance there and to go first of all into Tanganyika, Sierra Leone, Nigeria and Liberia. "This will take place in the coming six months or so," said Mr. Rhodes this morning.

CONGO

"The Congo was discussed, and when the political situation stabilises, CARE will consider going in there," he added.

The help will be mainly in food supplies and self-help programmes.

Mr. Averell Harriman, U.S. Ambassador-at-Large, addressed the CARE Conference on the subject of help to Africa.

Also, there was the newly-appointed Secretary for Agriculture, Governor O. Freeman. "His ideas are dynamic," said Mr. Rhodes, "particularly with regard to the usage of surplus foodstuffs."

Mr. Rhodes spent almost a month in the United States, lecturing, appearing on television, and addressing important groups of both men and women.

He addressed many Chinese groups in San Francisco, there being at a rough estimate about 100,000 Chinese people living there.

HK girl's success in U.S.

MARY WAT

Mary Wat of Hongkong, a senior at the College of Mount Saint Vincent, Riverdale, New York City, has been offered a graduate assistantship in chemistry at Pennsylvania State University for the academic year 1961-62. Her exceptional scholastic attainments merited an accompanying stipend of $1,008.

Miss Wat is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wat Po Kan, of Kowloon. A graduate of St. Mary's School, she received a scholarship to the College of Mount Saint Vincent.

With a major in chemistry and a minor in physics, Miss Wat will receive a bachelor of science degree, and plans to become a chemical engineer.

COOLER WEATHER LIKELY

Cooler weather is in store for the Colony today, a Royal Observatory spokesman told the China Mail.

"This is brought about by a cold surge coming through this morning from the north," he said.

"The temperature will continue to drop towards the evening."

Forecast for today: Moderate northerly winds becoming fresh later tonight. Cloudy and cooler.

Pakistan envoy returns to HK

Mr. Abdur Rab, Pakistan Trade Commissioner in Hongkong, returned by Air India's Boeing 707 today from Decca, East Pakistan, after a two-week holiday there.

Mr. Rab was among the guests invited on the inaugural flight of Air India's Boeing jet services on January 17.

Blood from tars

In response to an appeal by the British Red Cross Society, Blood Bank, many volunteers from HMS Heurmes donated blood this morning.

Six volunteers started work at 9 o'clock and within an hour and a half, 100 members of the crew had visited the ship's sick bay to donate blood. They were rewarded with free beer or soft drinks.

From the Files

25 years AGO

January 1936

Six thousand spectators including Hongkong's team of lady hockey interlopers, braved the inclement weather today and saw Hongkong score a thoroughly deserved victory in a mud battle at the Canidrome.

In the first quarter of an hour drizzle fell steadily but then later turned to very heavy snow. Both teams battled to a standstill and the players were just walking round in the last ten minutes. Hongkong's machine-like forwards showed perfect combination with Talbot, Leonard and Bernie Gosano outstanding. The score was 4-3.

His Majesty King Edward VIII was proclaimed King and Emperor in succession to the late King George with customary ceremonial at St James's Palace yesterday. Huge crowds being present.

One of the most successful business women in the Far East, one who in the past 16 years has built up one of the most extensive businesses of its kind in China, and who has earned for her production a world-wide reputation, arrived in Hongkong yesterday morning from Manila by the President Coolidge. She is Mrs. Helen C. Fette, President of the Fette Rug Company in Peking.

Make electricity consumers shareholders too

With reference to Government's rejection of the two power companies' proposals I wish to offer the following comments:

It appears that the main reason or aim of the present negotiations is to find a way whereby the consumers would get cheaper electricity than the present rates and at the same time enable the shareholders to have a reasonably good return out of their investments, and of course making sure that electricity would be available at all time in the event of emergency.

At the present way of negotiation I do not see how a satisfactory solution can be reached. The fact is that all shareholders are also consumers (if they reside in Hongkong or Kowloon), and if the present rates of electricity are considered to be excessive the shareholders, being also consumers, are also paying the same amount as other non-shareholders.

Therefore in order to be fair to the non-shareholders the only solution is to make them into shareholders as well. This can be done by converting their present shares into shares of the companies and these shares should have the same privilege and right as the present shareholders. I feel that this would be the best solution and beneficial to all concerned.

Regarding the question of assuring that electricity is not disrupted at all time, do not think that it would be too difficult for the power companies to come to a satisfactory arrangement one way or another, although amalgamation appears to be the best.

RAYMOND.

dear sir

A gardener for the Colonel

Colonel Harrington's letter in Friday's issue of your journal is interesting in some respects, but some of his conclusions appear to be quite incorrect.

It is true that the increase in local industry has given employment to many thousands who otherwise would be unemployed and it has also given more remunerative employment to others who have given up lower paid work to take a job at a machine.

This has raised the general standard of living of a very large group of residents (refugees) who in consequence are healthier and have exchanged their former drawn yellow, under-nourished appearance for a bright-eyed healthy look.

But there are still many tens or perhaps hundreds of thousands who have only occasional or no employment, whatever and who are in consequence still underfed and poverty-stricken.

Colonel Harrington is, I venture to suggest, incorrect in his assumption that in general the unemployed are lazy and do not wish to work. For example, we found in concentration camps during the Japanese occupation in Shanghai that a large percentage of people enjoy work, but on the other hand the majority are quite lazy and will only work in order to eat.

There are only a very small percentage who are too lazy to work at all even if this is the only way to secure food. Our own people are not one whit better, or more energetic than the average Chinese. We had a fairly large number of loafers in our camps, and surprisingly enough the proportion among the better educated—company directors etc.—was unusually high in relation to the average.

A great many people are unemployed because they are thin-skinned and timid—jobs go to the tough, aggressive, thick-skinned—the other poor chaps are left—empty bellies and disheartened in the struggle for jobs—such people need guidance, encouragement and help.

Those who heedlessly push their way to the head of the queues, shouldering the others aside, those who push their way on to the trams and buses are the thick-skinned, aggressive go-getters who always have jobs and who climb to success with the greatest frequency. (Although they often hang back from tough assignments, such as going over the top in face of shell and machine gun fire). They can quite easily take care of themselves in any circumstances.

Have we not previously read Colonel Harrington's complaints in the press regarding Hongkong's lazy refugees and his own difficulty in securing a suitable gardener?

If he is really serious in this respect, I can recommend a middle-aged, hard-working Shanghai gardener/handy man whom I have known and watched for more than 10 years in his struggle to establish himself and his wife and his two teen-aged children. This man, I am assured, would be very happy to accept Colonel Harrington's job at $170 per month, plus quarters, utensils etc. as detailed in his letter. I can be contacted at 820407 any day after office hours or by mail at 83 Waterloo-road.

Incidentally there is a man who lives in a small excavation in the earth beneath the steps of the Urban Council District Council Station (formerly Kowloon Mortuary) on Waterloo-road.

He lives like a fox or a badger without apparent help, without his wife, his neighbor (on the other side of the road) is the YMCA. Such a man should be noticed out of his lair and fed a good meal once daily at least and given a blanket or some warm clothes. There is an apparently mentally deranged woman who has occupied the sidewalk on Peace-avenue opposite Dairy Lane for a year or more. Surely she deserves better. Yet Colonel Harrington feels that people for charity are unwelcome.
